Did you arrive in Canada, as an adult, within the last 8 years?

Where you born and raised in Pakistan?
Are you 19 years-old or older?

کیا آپ بالغ ہونے کے بعد، پچھلے ۸ سالوں میں کینیڈا آئے؟
آپ کی پیدائش اور پرورش پاکستان میں ہوئی؟ k یا k
کیا آپ ۱۹ سال یا اس سے بڑے ہیں؟

If you answered yes to all 3 questions, we want to hear from you!

اگر آپ کے جوابات ہاں ہیں تو ہم آپ کی ای میل کے منتظر رہیں گے

We want to know what you think about shame, what you think is the best way to deal with this emotion, and how your experience in Canada might have changed (or not) what you think about it. If you chose to participate you will complete a short demographics questionnaire (5-10min) a telephone or equivalent email interview (4-6 emails over a month).

ہم یہ جاننا چاہتے ہیں کہ آپ شرم کے متعلق کیا سوچتے ہیں؟ آپ کو کیا لگتا ہے کہ اس احساس سے کیسے نمٹنا چاہیے؟ آپ کا اپنا ایکسپیرینس کینیڈا آ کر کیسے بدلے؟ یا نہیں بدلے؟
آپ ایک سوالیہ (۵-۱۰) منٹ اور تیلی فون یا ای میل انٹرویو (۴-۶ ای میل) کا جواب دے کر اس ریسرچ کا حصہ بن سکتے ہیں۔

All 20-25 participants will be entered in a draw to win one of two 50$ giftcards.

تمام شرکاء (۲۰-۲۵) کو دو ۵۰$ گفٹ کارڈ کی قرآ اندازی میں شامل کیا جائیگا

It has been nearly a year since Canada, the U.S. and Mexico signed a trilateral trade agreement to replace the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). Mexico ratified the agreement in June but the deal - known as the Canada-United States-Mexico Agreement (CUSMA) in Canada, and flipped around as USMCA south of the border - has yet to be ratified by either the U.S. or Canada.

Is Canada better off under the new, less catchy CUSMA

American lawmakers now say the deal could pass Congress by the end of November, despite political upheaval south of the border. In Canada, the ratification was put on pause until after the October federal election.

As the Nov. 30 anniversary of the signing of CUSMA approaches, the Globe speaks to three experts about the winners and losers in the deal - and what surprised them. Dennis Darby, chief executive of Canadian Manufacturers & Exporters, Drew Pagan, a professor at the Munk School of Global Affairs and Public Policy at the University of Toronto, and AHKubursi, professor emeritus of Economics at McMaster University and president of Economic Research Ltd., weigh in on the new trade era for North America.

How does Canada fare with CUSMA? Mr. Darby of the Canadian Manufacturers & Exporters says the trade negotiation wasn't an exercise in substantially improving the agreement for Canada. "It was about maintaining our access to the markets," he says, adding there were a number of very positive changes for Canada.

"At various points in the process, the U.S. had threatened fairly significant changes to market access, fairly significant changes to U.S. content requirements," he says. "So, at the end of the day, we did well."

The trilateral agreement includes greater co-ordination of customs procedures, a commitment to strengthen regulatory co-operation, provisions addressing digital trade, and commitments by the three countries to co-operate to combat counterfeit goods.

Mr. Pagan of the Munk School of Global Affairs says it was U.S. President Donald Trump who demanded renegotiation in the context of U.S. protectionism.

He says the North American economy has changed significantly since the NAFTA agreement was negotiated in 1992, particularly the increase in technology and in services. "You could have made a good argument for renegotiating regardless of who was in the White House or who was prime minister," Mr. Pagan says.

Unsurprisingly, that modernization is not the focus of the agreement. "There was progress made in those areas but fundamentally it was a negotiation in which the Americans demanded that Canada and Mexico make concessions out of a premise that most people think is false - that the original NAFTA was unfair to the United States," Mr. Pagan says.

Still, he believes Canada emerged reasonably well. "Sure, there were some concessions made with regard to supply management, with regard to pharmaceuticals, with regard to auto trade," he says. "But not so fundamental as to damage our overall economic interests and, all in circumstances where domestic policy could be used to make up for the challenges politically and economically."

Mr. Kubursi of Econometric Research says there are pitfalls with CUSMA, but describes it as a win for most important market. The percentage of U.S. imports from Canada compared to other countries has declined substantially, he says.

"There's a move towards markets that can't be solved solely through a NAFTA agreement," Mr. Pagan says. "Part of it has to do with our competitiveness; part of it has to do with the transition of the Canadian economy from hewers of wood and drawers of water to services and more intellectual capital pursuits."

"Is there anything in USMCA that would accelerate those trends once again?" he asks. "I'm not sure there is."

Mr. Kubursi said a major loss was in the dairy industry. "We have to open our market. The Americans wanted even to change the supply-management system. They did not but they put a dent into it, no question about it," Mr. Kubursi says.

Another loss, he says, is intellectual property. "The [patented] protection of certain property rights - particularly pharmaceuticals - is longer than we would like. This will impose a high cost on a system like ours, which is highly funded," Mr. Kubursi says.

In the auto industry, he says the rules of origin favour the U.S. over Canada's Mexico.

What was the biggest surprise? Mr. Kubursi says it was unexpected recognition that Canada's steel and aluminum industry also came as a surprise. "Everything that we negotiated in NAFTA successfully to maintain access to the markets, to make sure there were no unnecessary or unreasonable tariffs to move parts, materials and products back and forth and then the U.S. applied the [Section 232] tariff on steel and aluminum and Canada got caught," Mr. Darby says.

Mr. Pagan believes the biggest surprise was in the language around

Never forget Baghdadadi was Canada's enemy as well

The fifth anniversary of the killing of Cpl. Nathan Cirillo could have gone almost unnoticed, given that it was the day after the federal election and there was much else competing for news coverage.

Thankfully that didn't happen, and politicians and media took time to acknowledge the Canadian soldier who was killed on ceremonial duty in front of the Canadian National War Memorial on Oct. 22, 2014.

Politicians and members of the public offered their thoughts and respects. We were reminded that martyr Cirillo was a dog lover, and that a dog run had been named after him in Hamilton, his home. We learned that proceeds from an album were being put into a trust fund for

Canada is Not Okay (Trust Me)

In this modern world, good news is hard to come by. The fight is on the march in communities and governments around the world, people are being ground into dust by a dystopian neoliberal global economy that is not delivering tangible results and we're on the verge of a full-on apocalyptic nightmare scenario of climate change displacing millions around the world, disrupting the global food supply, and devastating infectious diseases last seen in the stone age from the arctic permafrost. So keeping all that in mind, it's understandable that people are looking for positive signs that somewhere out there, things are... maybe not improving, but not actively getting worse.

In the recent Canadian election an example of that? Albeit, our liberal establishment's favourite Prime Minister is still standing strong, mainly, the brand new People's Party seemingly remains steadfastly to kick the tires of our nascent fascist movement and see if it can be harnessed as an electoral constituency was resoundingly defeated. The New Democrats shrugged off their initial doomsday projections, returned to their social democratic roots and are now holding a sizeable amount of parliamentary power behind their charismatic leader-the first racial and religious minority to ever lead a Canadian political party. It is possible Canada is proof positive that "the wave of Trumpism has created a real and the center-left alternative is rising".

The simple answer: no. No, it isn't. While last week's election was not the worst case scenario for Trudeau and the Liberal Party, it is most certainly a rebuke from Canadian voters, as their government was reduced to minority status (and not the kind of minority status that Trudeau usually embraces). It may have ended much worse for the Party, but a stronger than expected showing in the Toronto city center and Atlantic Canada, mostly a result of strategic voters terrified of a conservative government than an actual endorsement of their performance as a political party, ended up allowing them to maintain their grip on power despite losing the popular vote to the Conservative Party and being seemingly decimated in Western Canada.

Now Trudeau will inherit an incredibly fractured political landscape with reinvigorated sovereignty movements in multiple provinces (we'll get to that, and he'll need to) on NDP votes in order to pass any agenda, which he has already indicated is going to be focused on a regressive tax cut and continuing to run through the Trans Mountain Pipeline. So as much as certain establishment figures would very much like to frame this election result as some kind of national rebuke to the toxic, divisive politics and perpetual crises that have enveloped nations across the west, it would be genuinely shocking if this government lasts longer than 18 months.

Despite all the staid media type and pop cultural credibility he managed to build up over the course of his very impressive campaign, the Jagmeet Singh-led New Democratic Party actually took a step backward in terms of their parliamentary representation. And while the NDP is no stranger to underwhelming electoral results, this one is especially difficult to swallow. For while Singh and his party did take a step towards campaigning the way progressive activists have been begging them to for years, using unapologetic language around class and inequality, calling for a wealth tax and a significant expansion of Canada's welfare state, they were almost completely wiped out in Quebec, losing all but one of their remaining seats in the province that just a few years ago was hunkered in an Orange Wave that at the time seemed like a possibly permanent political realignment. There are a number of reasons one could point to as to why this seemingly volatile Quebec voters rejected Singh and the NDP in favor of the rearguard Bloc Quebecois (who I didn't even mention in my election preview, proving that I am a political genius), but there's plenty of

How Trudeau can win back Canada's West

All Canadians will be rooting for Jim Carr, who served only as Prime Minister Justin Trudeau's cabinet during the last Parliament. He announced Friday that he has been diagnosed with blood cancer.

Mr. Carr will know that his illness worsens Mr. Trudeau's already irremediable dilemma of finding cabinet ministers who can represent the Prairie provinces.

The former natural resources minister helped engineer the federal government's purchase of the Trans Mountain pipeline to prevent its expansion from being cancelled. As international trade minister, he shepherded the ratification of the revised Trans-Pacific Partnership agreement.

Mr. Carr may or may not be able to serve in cabinet while receiving treatment. Regardless, the diagnosis makes the work of putting together a cabinet even tougher for Mr. Trudeau.

Three other Winnipeg MPs survived the Prairie drubbing the Liberals endured on election night: Terry Duguid, Kevin Lamoureux and Dan Vandal. Mr. Lamoureux has been in Parliament since 2010, the other since 2015. None has made a particularly strong impression, but at least one of them is likely to be named to cabinet. Other than these three and Mr. Carr, there isn't a Liberal MP to be found between Winnipeg and Greater Vancouver.

Senators can serve in cabinet, but Mr. Trudeau expelled all the Liberal senators from caucus in 2014 during the Senate expenses scandal and as Prime Minister has appointed only independent senators.

As Carleton University associate professor Philippe Lagassé points out, cabinet ministers need not be members of caucus. They could remain independent of party while still fulfilling ministerial duties.

"The Senate has traditionally offered reasons of shoring up a lack of representation in cabinet in light of a party's lack of MPs from a region or province in the House," said Prof. Lagassé, an authority on Westminster parliamentary practice, in an e-mail exchange Sunday. "If the Senate reforms are now closing the door to this representative function, then the reforms may have a real problem."

Calgary Mayor Naheed Nenshi is often mentioned as a possible parachute candidate for cabinet via immigration component.

The final step for U.S. citizens to attach IRS Form 8854, Initial and Annual Expiration Statement, to their final U.S. income tax return, for the year of renunciation. This is the tax compliance component of expatriation. Failure to take both of these steps means the renouncer will remain subject to U.S. tax payment and reporting obligations.

Generally, renunciation has no future U.S. tax issues for the renouncer except if the person is classified by the Internal Revenue Service as a "covered expatriate." This means they satisfy one or more of three criteria: an average annual U.S. income tax liability for the five years preceding expiration of more than US$168,000; a net worth over US$2-million on the date of expiration; or if they have incurred US$168,000 in tax returns for the five years before expiration.

Being a covered expatriate may be costly. Section 877A of the Internal Revenue Code deems a covered expatriate to have sold all their worldwide assets at their fair market value on the day before expatriation. Any accumulated capital gains would be taxable in the year of expatriation.

The renouncer who is a covered expatriate is subject to IRS tax on capital gains on their assets that exceed US$25,000 payable upon the expatriation at approximately a 20 per cent rate on gains, and on their gifts or testamentary bequests to U.S. donees or beneficiaries at 40 per cent.

There are two exceptions. The first is that anyone born a dual citizen is automatically not a covered expatriate. The second is limited to citizens who have not lived in the United States for more than 10 of the last 15 years before the age of 18 and a half. In any event, the renouncer must comply with their U.S. tax returns for the last five years.

Lastly, if the renouncer would be a covered expatriate because their net worth exceeds US$2-million, gifting assets to the renouncer's spouse before filing for renunciation may avoid that status. For example, a renouncer could give the Canadian principle residence to their husband or wife and come in below US$2-million, avoiding double taxes.

Andrew Scheer is renouncing his U.S. citizenship. Here's what Americans living in Canada should know Conservative Party Leader Andrew Scheer came under fire during the recent election for being a dual citizen of Canada and the United States. According to a report in The Globe and Mail, Mr. Scheer's father is a U.S. citizen by birth, and obtained citizenship for his children.

Unlike some Canadians who were unaware of their U.S. citizenship, Mr. Scheer is an accidental American. As required by U.S. tax law, he has reported his income and filed U.S. tax returns. He also says he has submitted his renunciation paperwork and is waiting for confirmation that he is no longer a U.S. citizen.

As Mr. Scheer likely knows, the expatriation process varies from any dual citizens looking to follow in his shoes should know that there are ways to avoid paying extra tax upon renouncing U.S. citizenship.

Under U.S. law, citizens of the United States living in Canada are still considered American. They must file an annual tax return each year, Form 1040, US Individual Income Tax Return, to report income from all sources, worldwide.

In addition to reporting worldwide income, U.S. citizens living in Canada must disclose to the IRS any foreign assets, such as property and investments, held alone or jointly with another person. This ensures that anyone who has foreign accounts and assets is properly taxed. The most significant example is the foreign bank account reports that must be filed by anyone who has foreign accounts containing more than US$10,000 at any point during the year. This includes bank accounts, RRSPs, IRAs, etc.

The simplest way of renouncing citizenship is to schedule a loss-of-nationality appointment at a specified U.S. embassy or consulate. The wait for an appointment can vary significantly from location to location. The average is three to six months. Renouncers must attend the appointment in person and pay US$2,350. However, this is only the

Saif Ali Khan and Kareena Kapoor Khan host a grand and glittery Diwali bash for family and friends

The whole nation was immersed in the celebrating Diwali on Sunday, October 27, and when it comes to celebrating, no one does it like Bollywood celebrities. Similarly was the case with Saif Ali Khan and Kareena Kapoor Khan, who hosted a small yet stylish bash for family. A fan-made account of the actress shared some pictures of her and the couple and they indeed looked ravishing:

The bash was attended by family members like Kunal Kemmu, Soha Ali Khan and Malaika Arora. It was a strictly family affair but as stated above, a glittery one. Soha Ali Khan shared some pictures on her Instagram account and the looked gorgeous and Kimmritry/handsome:

Fashion stylist Maneka Harsinghani posted pictures of Annu and it seems there's hardly anything the diva cannot pull off.

The Pakistanis truly know how to do everything with grandeur, and Khan and his Diwali bash consolidated the fact. They know how to grace the occasion as scintillatingly as possible!

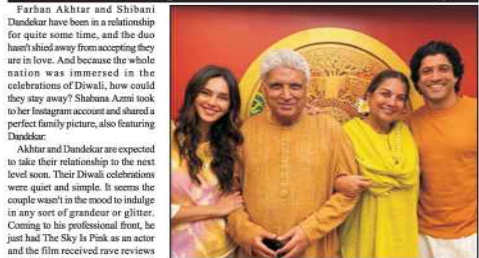

Actor Rajkumar Rao has always been favourite of the masses. The actor starred in a two-minute-long ad-film, a campaign by Prime Minister Narendra Modi called India Wali Diwali. Earlier actress Deepika Padukone has been part of a similar government campaign called the Bharat Ki Laxmi campaign.

In the video, Rajkumar is first heard in a voice-over in which well-known television actors are seen packing gifts for Diwali. He later comes on to the screen to encourage the audience to make this festival of Diwali special for the underprivileged children too. He urged the citizens to donate clothes, toys, and gifts to those who cannot afford it on their own and make it a happy festival for them as well.

The actor's appeal to the audience is strong which touches the sentiments of people with outmodedness.

"The simplicity of thought here was amazing. And that had to be translated into the visuals as well. The treatment and grammar were very simplistic, open, and easy to the eye. Rajkumar Rao brought tremendous credibility to the film and the campaign. He just fit fine with this art and it was evident that he truly believes in the cause that he is supporting," the director Ankit Sharma says.

Diwali 2019: Farhan Akhtar and Shibani Dandekar bring in the festival together with his family

Farhan Akhtar and Shibani Dandekar have been in a relationship for quite some time, and the duo haven't shied away from accepting they are in love. And because the whole nation was immersed in the celebrations of Diwali, how could they stay away? Shibani Akmi took to her Instagram account and shared a perfect family picture, also featuring Dandekar.

Akhtar and Dandekar are expected to take their relationship to the next level soon. Their Diwali celebrations were quiet and simple. It seems the couple wasn't in the mood to indulge in any sort of grandeur or glitter. Coming to his professional front, he just had 'The Sky Is Pink' as an actor and the film received rave reviews from critics. He will next star in Rakhey's Omprakash Mehta's Toofan, a boxing drama releasing on October 1, 2020.

As a producer, he gave us Gully Boy earlier this year, which is now India's official entry to the Oscars for 2020. But fans are actually waiting for the announcement of Don 3, and have been constantly asking him to make direct the film soon and that too with Shah Rukh Khan. I guess he's busy with his acting assignment and it's unlikely to return to direction anytimes.

After Deepika Padukone's Bharat Ki Laxmi campaign, Rajkumar Rao stars in India Wali Diwali campaign

Netherlands crush Pakistan's Olympic dreams with 6-1 demolition

AMSTERDAM: Pakistan came into the game hopeful and optimistic. The Netherlands left them bruised and battered.

A day after stunning the hosts with a 4-4 draw in the first leg of their Olympic qualifier, Pakistan came crashing down to earth on Sunday as the Netherlands thrashed them 6-1 to seal a 10-5 aggregate victory and punch their tickets to Tokyo for next year's Games.

Pakistan hockey: From champions to qualifiers

The Dutch were devastating on Sunday, racing into a 4-0 lead at halftime with Mink van der Weerden scoring twice and Bijen Kellerman and Mirco Prajzer both firing home glorious backhand efforts.

Terrance Pieters and Jip Janssen then scored in the space of four minutes in the third quarter to effectively end the contest altogether before Rizwan Ali's drag-flick conversion gave Pakistan a consolation goal seven minutes from time.

"It is a bad day, we have missed out on the Olympics," said Pakistan's Rashid Mahmood, as the three-time Olympic champions missed out on reaching the Games for a second successive time.

"We couldn't make it [happen] in the second game. The Dutch team defended very well in the game today and we didn't start very well, we made a lot of mistakes. In the first half they took advantage of that. We couldn't match their pace in the first half."

Kellerman has scored with a sensational backhand strike on Saturday and he was at it again on Sunday. Robbert Kempenaar cut in from the right before finding Kellerman on the left, who smashed a stunning backhand strike into the bottom right corner from an ever-narrowing angle to give the Netherlands a ninth-minute lead.

Vander Weerden, who scored twice on Saturday including the last-gasp leveller for the Dutch, doubled their advantage in the 17th, firing in a penalty stroke after a rapid attack was cynically cut short by the Pakistani defence.

It was 3-0 five minutes later with Prajzer linking into the circle and finishing clinically before Van der Weerden's powerful drag-flick but extinguished Pakistan's hopes in the 28th.

"I think the tempo we played today was a lot better, and I think that made the difference," said Van der Weerden. "Our tempo on the ball was a lot better, there was a lot more energy and that is a big difference. It means a lot [to qualify for the Olympics]. It is the event that we all play for. Winning really means a lot."

Test men get last chance to boost form ahead of Australia series

KARACHI: Newly-appointed Pakistan captain Azhar Ali is among seven players who will be hoping to have a decent run in red-ball cricket resumes after a 20-day gap with the fifth-round of the Quaid-e-Azam Trophy's First XI competition starting from Monday.

With Pakistan slated to face the might of Australia in a two-match Test series from Nov 21, Azhar will be hoping to travel Down Under with his batting form intact after being among the main in the previous four rounds while leading Central Punjab to the top of six-team standings.

The 34-year-old right-handed Azhar lies second behind championship's top run-getter Ashfaq Ahmed, who has amassed 473 runs with the aid of three centuries at a staggering average of 157.66 for third-placed Khyber Pakhtunkhwa - with a tally of 388 runs (ave 77.60), figures which include centuries.

However, Azhar has opted to relinquish the captaincy for Central Punjab's fixture against Sindh at the Iqbal Stadium in Faisalabad chiefly because he will be available for the rest of domestic first-class season since he would be involved in the Tests at Brisbane (Nov 21-25) and Adelaide (day/night game, Nov 29-Dec 3). Vice-captain Ahmed Shehbaz, thus, takes over the Central Punjab leadership.

In the previous four rounds saw as many as 29 three-figure individual knock being scored but Pakistan batsman Asad Shafiq has still to score a hundred this season. The diminutive right-hander has made just 254 runs (ave 63.50) with a best of 81 - against Khyber Pakhtunkhwa at Karachi - in four matches for Sindh.

Sindh are expected to be led by their appointed skipper Sarfaraz Ahmed, who was not only recently sacked as Pakistan Test and T20 captain but was not included in the either squad for the Australia tour.

The wicket-keeper batsman's solitary appearance in the competition was the first-round game against Balochistan at the UBL Sports Complex in Karachi.

reaching the Games for a second successive time.

It was 3-0 five minutes later with Prajzer linking into the circle and finishing clinically before Van der Weerden's powerful drag-flick but extinguished Pakistan's hopes in the 28th.

"I think the tempo we played today was a lot better, and I think that made the difference," said Van der Weerden. "Our tempo on the ball was a lot better, there was a lot more energy and that is a big difference. It means a lot [to qualify for the Olympics]. It is the event that we all play for. Warner's birthday T20 ton as Australia slam Sri Lanka

David Warner emphatically bounced back to form with a first-ever Twenty20 century as Australia crushed Sri Lanka by 134 runs in their opening match of the three-game series in Adelaide on Sunday.

Birthday boy Warner clubbed a massive 233 to two, aided by century stands with skipper Aaron Finch and Glenn Maxwell.

Sri Lanka limped to 99 for nine from their 20 overs in a meek response, with leg-spinner Adam Zampa capturing three for 14.

It was Australia's biggest-ever win in the format and Sri Lanka's heaviest T20 defeat.

Coming off a dismal Ashes campaign in England and low scores in the new domestic season, Warner plundered his ton of 56 balls with fours and 10 fours.

The left-handed opener scored just 95 runs in 10 innings for Australia's Ashes retention, but once he got set on Sunday he pounded the Sri Lankan bowlers with belligerence, and reached his hundred off the last ball of the innings.

The ton on his 33rd birthday was complemented by blistering half-centuries from Finch and Maxwell, as the Australians ripped into the Sri Lankan bowlers - with Kasun Rajitha's 0-75 off four overs proving the most expensive figures in a T20 international.

"I'm glad to contribute to the team and put us in great position," Warner said. "It was a great match. We got a great total on the board and it's always tough to chase a big one down in Australia."

Ontario and Ottawa should ban flavoured vaping products

It took its sweet time, but the Ford government in Ontario is finally doing the right thing by banning the promotion of vaping products in convenience stores and gas stations as of Jan. 1.

After all, doctors and smoking experts have been sounding the alarm for years now that governments should act to prevent the big tobacco giants from marketing their addictive, nicotine-laced vaping products to kids.

But the Ford government didn't listen. Worse, it actually caved to the lobbying efforts of Big Tobacco and convenience store owners and delayed the implementation of the ban - similar to one in seven other provinces - which was supposed to take effect in July 2018.

At long last, though, Health Minister Christine Elliott has put an end to that, saying she wants to protect young people from the long-term effects of vaping.

Still, Ontario, and Ottawa, too, should do much more than ban convenience store marketing if they are to protect kids from the well-practised methods employed by tobacco giants to get kids addicted to nicotine.

They could start by taking their lead from Donald Trump, of all people.

In September, in the midst of an outbreak of vaping-related illnesses in the United States, Trump announced that his administration will ban the sale of most flavoured e-cigarettes. Michigan already has such a ban in place, and New York State is moving the same direction.

That's a smart move since the companies that make and sell vaping products have a formula for getting teens addicted to nicotine. They add candy, fruit, mint or menthol flavours to the products and then spend a fortune on "cool" advertising.

"We can't allow people to get sick," Trump said last month. "We can't have our kids be affected."

On this, he's right. As of Thursday the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported 1,604 cases

Halloween In Ontario Is Going To Be A Total Mess Due To Snow & 100Km/Hour Winds

But it's not too late for Ontario to be first out of the gate in Canada with a ban on flavoured vaping products. The Ontario Medical Association, Canadian Cancer Society and Ontario Campaign for Action on Tobacco have all been calling on Ontario and Ottawa to impose such a ban.

Meanwhile, Health Canada has had long enough to ponder feedback on the proposals it put forth last year to curb youth vaping.

Among methods it is considering: restricting the advertising of vaping products, requiring manufacturers to put health warnings on the packaging of nicotine-laced e-cigarettes, and banning flavoured vaping liquids and inhaling devices designed specifically to attract kids, such as those that look like USB devices.

There is no time to dilly-dally.

Both governments should act quickly to prevent more kids from getting ill from vaping and stop another generation from becoming addicted to nicotine.

government would consider only raising class sizes to 25. That idea was rejected by OSSTF, which said it came along with a proposal to eliminate all the class size caps now contained in local collective agreements.

As negotiations with all the teachers' unions head into critical stages, all sides are looking for public support.

Education workers have rallied behind the slogan "Cuts hurt kids," staging rallies last week and launching social-media and advertising campaigns.

Lece created his own version of the same message, tweeting on Friday that "cuts hurt kids" and stressing the importance of getting a deal.

He has emphasized he wants to avoid the cycle of anxiety parents face during each round of contract negotiations with education unions, wondering if there will be a work disruption.

But his government's plans for education have met fierce resistance from unions, as well as some students and parents who say the quality of public education is under attack.

Also controversial is the government's plan to require high school students to take four of their "Periods of soaking rain are likely on Thursday combined with a raw east wind," says Weather Network meteorologist Dr. Doug Gillham. "We could see some rain-free periods during the day, but at this point, it looks like we will have wet weather for trick-or-treating during the early evening."

Ontario high school teachers pull trigger to be in legal strike position by mid November

Ontario's public high school teachers are expected to be in a legal position to strike or stage work disruptions around Nov. 15.

The union representing the teachers as well as some support staff has asked for a "no-board" report from the conciliator in the fractious contract negotiations. Issuance of the report triggers a 17-day countdown to a legal strike position.

The Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF) is one of the major education unions engaged in contract negotiations that have become a battleground over the Progressive Conservative government's plans to increase class sizes, cut per-pupil funding and keep wage increases non-existent.

Mid November will be crunch time.

Unions representing public elementary and Catholic teachers are also conducting strike votes and expect to have results by then.

Strike votes are a common pressure tactic in negotiations and don't mean there will be job action. Being in a legal strike position doesn't guarantee there will be one, either, although it's one step closer to the possibility.

About 55,000 education workers represented by CUPE began working to rule earlier this month as soon as they were legally able to do so. They also planned to strike a week later, which would have closed hundreds of schools across the province, including at the Ottawa-Carleton School Board. A tentative deal was reached at the last minute.

Any work disruptions by OSSTF would affect both high schools and elementary schools. The union represents high school teachers at English public school boards and some support staff at various boards. At the Ottawa-Carleton District School Board, for instance, OSSTF represents school secretaries, janitors, early childhood educators and educational assistants, among others.

While negotiations are conducted separately for the high school teachers
