Canada unexpectedly loses 1,800 jobs, widely missing forecasts

The nation lost 16,100 full-time jobs

OTTAWA - The Canadian job market stagnated unexpectedly in October, losing 1,800 net positions, while the unemployment rate remained at 5.5 per cent, Statistics Canada said on Friday, as employment declined in the manufacturing and construction sectors.

Analysts in a Reuters poll had forecast a gain of 15,900 jobs in October and an unemployment rate of 5.5 per cent. Wages for permanent employees rose by 4.4 per cent, Statscan said.

Canada lost 16,100 full-time positions last month, but gained 14,300 part-time jobs. The number of self-employed workers in October fell by 27,800.

The Canadian dollar weakened to a three-week low of $1.3232 to the U.S. dollar, or 75.57 cents U.S., after the jobs data was released.

"It definitely runs against the grain of very strong job gains we've seen through most of the past year," said Doug Porter, chief economist at BMO Capital Markets, noting there was likely a "small, temporary boom" because of hiring tied to last month's national election.

"We have to be cautious about reading too much into any one report, but it shows that the economy is not simply on a one-way trip north here," Porter said.

Canada's central bank, which has not moved since October 2018 even as their counterparts - including the U.S. Federal Reserve - have eased, hold firm as expected last week, but left the door open to a possible future cut to help the economy weather the damaging effects of global trade conflicts. The Bank of Canada said it would monitor "the extent to which the global slowdown spreads beyond manufacturing and investment" going forward while watching domestic data.

"I don't think one number will move the needle a whole lot at the Bank of Canada, but at the margin it's a little bit more of a cautious signal," Derek Holt, vice president of capital markets economics at Scotiabank, said of the jobs report.

Statscan said the services sector gained 39,000 jobs in October, with increases reported in public administration, as well as finance, real estate, insurance and rental leasing industries, while the goods-producing sectors saw a decline of 40,900 jobs on losses in manufacturing and construction.

The country's manufacturing sector lost 23,100 jobs in October, mostly located in Ontario, while the construction sector lost 21,300 positions across five provinces, Statscan said.

In a separate release, Statistics Canada said the value of Canadian building permits dropped by a larger-than-expected 6.5 per cent in September to $8.3 billion because of declines in the residential sector.

Canada supports genocide case against Myanmar at International Court of Justice

OTTAWA - Canada is supporting a genocide lawsuit against the Myanmar government over systemic violence that forced more than 700,000 Rohingya Muslims to flee their country.

Gambia filed the genocide application on Monday with the International Court of Justice in The Hague on behalf of the Organization of Islamic Co-operation, a group of 57 Muslim countries.

Foreign Affairs Minister Chrystia Freeland said in a statement the move will advance accountability for the crime of genocide, which includes mass murder, systemic discrimination, hate speech and sexual and gender-based violence.

The Canadian government will look for ways to support Gambia's legal efforts, she added. To that end, she said the government will enlist the help of former Liberal interim leader and longtime politician Bob Rae, who also served as Canada's special envoy to Myanmar.

"Canada will work with other like-minded countries to end impunity for those accused of committing the gravest crimes under international law," Freeland said. "Ensuring that the perpetrators of these atrocities are held to account is imperative to provide justice to the victims and survivors while building lasting peace and reconciliation in Myanmar."

Rae, in his report on Myanmar released last year, urged Canada to play a leading role in any international prosecution of the perpetrators of violence in the South Asian country.

Rae also predicted legal challenges for the international community if it decided to pursue a prosecution against Myanmar's leaders for crimes against humanity.

The main challenge would be to create a credible and independent tribunal that could hear the case, he said, noting that special tribunals were set up to prosecute war crimes in Cambodia, Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia.

In September 2018, the House of Commons unanimously supported a motion that said the crimes against the Rohingya were a genocide. The motion also reiterated a call for the UN Security Council to refer Myanmar to the International Criminal Court.

The motion coincided with a United Nations fact-finding mission that reported the Myanmar military systematically killed thousands of Rohingya civilians, burned hundreds of their villages and engaged in ethnic cleansing and mass gang rape. It called for top generals to be investigated and prosecuted for genocide.

A statement on Monday from Human Rights Watch on behalf of 10 international non-governmental organizations said the move by Gambia represented "the first judicial scrutiny of Myanmar's campaign of murder, rape, arson, and other atrocities against Rohingya Muslims."

Doug Ford's government and NDP opposition battle over Ontario's job numbers

The Ontario government and the NDP opposition are battling over job numbers in the province, with each side releasing information Friday to support its own narrative.

Vic Fedeli, minister of economic development, job creation and trade, said since the PC government's election in June of 2018, employment numbers in Ontario have risen by 256,200.

"The government has a plan to create an environment that attracts investment and encourages entrepreneurs to grow their businesses and create high-paying, good quality jobs in Ontario, and we are seeing the results of that," Fedeli said in a statement released Friday.

Shortly after Fedeli's statement, Catherine Fife, the NDP's economic growth and job creation critic, released one of her own, citing last month's Labour Force Survey, which shows Ontario shed 24,200 full-time jobs in October.

"Ontario's manufacturing sector lost 17,500 jobs last month," Fife said. "Those are good, mortgage-paying jobs you can raise a family on. In Thunder Bay alone, 200 Bombardier jobs will be lost today. That means tens of thousands of families are hurting right now, worrying about how they're going to keep the heat on and put food on the table."

Ontario finance minister says

province will best projected deficit by $1.3 billion

On Wednesday, the provincial government released its fall economic statement, which included a proposal to reduce the small business tax rate by 8.7 percent starting next year.

Finance Minister Rod Phillips says the move would help 275,000 businesses in the province and help stimulate job growth. Phillips also claims his party's legislation is moving the province in the right direction.

"Solving these challenges has not been about grand gestures, but rather the practical and meaningful actions that help make life easier and more affordable for people, like reducing taxes, investing in health care and education, and building modern transit and roads," said Phillips.

However, Fife says the PC government's policies thus far are actually taking the province backwards when it comes to the economy. She says in health care alone, thousands of jobs have been lost.

"Under the Liberals, Ontario lost 300,000 manufacturing jobs, and health care was left hanging by a thread. Instead of fixing those problems, it looks like Doug Ford is putting Ontario on the path from bad to worse," Fife said.

On Friday Ontario Green Party Leader Mike Schreiner weighed in, saying "The Premier cannot have it both ways, claiming credit for solid economic numbers while repeating a false narrative that pollution pricing is causing a recession." Schreiner referred to Premier Doug Ford's continued battle against a federal carbon tax "It's not pollution pricing that will kill jobs. It will be the Premier's regressive economic plan that is completely silent on $26 trillion global clean economy."

Immigrant-fuelled demand is helping to power Canada's housing market

Immigrants buy 21 per cent of houses and may purchase 680,000 homes during the next five years, a Royal LePage poll shows. Newcomers to Canada account for more than a fifth of the housing market, helping boost real estate in Ontario, Quebec and B.C., according to a new survey. Immigrants buy 21 per cent of houses and may purchase 680,000 homes during the next five years if migration levels are maintained, the poll commissioned by Royal LePage shows. "In addition to supporting Canada's economic growth, newcomers to Canada are vital to the health of our national real estate market," Phil Saper, Royal LePage president and CEO, said in a statement. "Newcomers are doing more than investing in Canadian real estate, they are investing in their family's future." The survey finds as the country's housing markets rebound from the imposition of tighter mortgage rules over the past two years that were brought in to limit speculation and soaring prices in markets such as Vancouver and Toronto. Prices have fallen in Vancouver and increases slowed in Toronto, but their markets are gathering steam again. Buying activity rose another 0.6 per cent in September to $12,000 units (seasonally adjusted and annualized) - the highest level in 21 months and 6.6 per cent above the 10-year average, according to the Canadian Real Estate Association. More evidence of a red-hot real estate market came on Wednesday when the Toronto Real Estate Board reported that condo sales in the third quarter rose 11.1 per cent compared to the same period last year. "Condominium apartments are obviously a popular choice amongst first-time home-buyers," said Jason Mercer, TREB's chief market analyst. "Moreover, it is also important to remember that condominium apartments owned by investors represent a huge component of the GTA rental stock and certainly account for most additions to the rental stock, on net, over the past decade." Royal Bank of Canada senior economist Robert Hogue notes that conditions are ripe for another rally in housing prices after a pause earlier in the year. "Demand-supply conditions have tightened up, and are gradually heating up prices. Low interest rates, strong labour markets and rapid population growth will continue to fuel demand in the period ahead," said Hogue in a report. "Promises made during the federal election campaign could heat things up further." All the major political parties remain open to some levels of immigration, and the perception appears to hold among newcomers, according to the LePage survey. The poll of 1,500 people who arrived in Canada within the last 10 years found more than half of newcomers - 54 per cent - chose Canada because it's a good place to live and work while three quarters said they didn't consider moving to the U.S., with 31 per cent citing a better reception for immigrants in Canada and 26 per cent saying it was safe. Almost half - 46 per cent - chose Ontario, helping power the province's property market especially in Toronto and Ottawa, according to the survey. Nearly a third - 32 per cent - of newcomers to those cities buy houses, which is the national average, the poll showed. That compares with 68 per cent home ownership for all Canadians, according to Statistics Canada. Quebec drew 19 per cent of newcomers because of good schools, quality of life and relative affordability, which helps counter an aging population and those who leave the province, according to Royal LePage's local vice president and general manager, Dominic S. Pien. "In addition to enriching the province's social fabric, newcomers provide a population boost that supports both a healthy economy and vibrant real estate market," S. Pien said. B.C. came third with about 13 per cent of newcomers to Canada, according to Statistics Canada and holds the survey's highest amount - 89 per cent - of those who arrive with savings to buy a house, perhaps explaining the strong influx of wealthy Asians in the market.

Huawei founder, whose daughter is under arrest in Canada, speaks out about U.S. pressure

For decades, Huawei's founder stayed out of sight as it grew to become the biggest maker of network gear for phone carriers and passed Apple's No. 2 smartphone brand. Now, Ren Zhengfei is shedding that anonymity as China's first global tech brand mobilizes to fight back against U.S. sanctions and warnings Huawei Technologies Ltd. is a security risk. The entrepreneur at the center of the Trump administration's battle with Beijing over technology is a survivor of competition that drove Western rivals out of the market, brushes with financial disaster and job stress so severe he contemplated suicide. The 75-year-old former army engineer who worked his way out of childhood poverty sees American pressure as just the latest of the tests that have hardened him and his company. "For three decades, Huawei has been suffering and no joy," Ren said in an interview with The Associated Press. "The pain of each episode is different."

Washington has transformed Ren from an admired but rarely seen businessman worth an estimated US$33 billion into one of China's most prominent figures. He belongs to the generation of entrepreneurs who founded communist-era China's first private companies in the 1980s. They navigated a shifting, state-dominated landscape, overcoming shortages of money and technology to create industries that are expanding abroad. Ren launched Huawei in 1987 after his military post was eliminated. Huawei is a star in industries the ruling Communist Party is promoting but a target for complaints those plans are based on stealing or pressuring foreign companies to hand over business secrets.

ruling party embarked on the Great Leap Forward, a disastrous campaign to become an industrial power overnight. At least 30 million people died in the 1959-61 famine that followed. Ren's mother declared no one would die and divided each meal into nine portions, one for each family member, said Tian Tao, co-author of "The Huawei Story." "His mother's meal system had a big impact on him," said Tian. Following that ethos, Huawei says it is owned by the Chinese citizens who make up half its workforce of 180,000. Ren's ownership has declined to 1.14% as more shares are distributed to employees. Ren joined the army in the 1960s and was sent to the northeast to build a textile factory. He said he slept outdoors in weather as cold as -28 C (-18 F) and ate noodles and pickled radish. Ren says he has tried to endure Huawei's long-term survival through a system of shared decision-making. Still, he is known as a forceful, even autocratic, decision-maker. Huawei CFO in court, defence argues unlawful arrest. That was followed by a battle in 2000 over whether to develop the personal hand-phone system, which caught on as a low-cost alternative to mobile service. Ren rejected PHIS as a distraction from work on next-generation mobile technology that promised to be cheaper and more reliable. Ren said he resisted appeals to back PHIS as bills for 3G development rose to 6 billion yuan ($750 million). "Today's crisis is one-tenth or 1% of the pressure at that time," Ren said.

Ontario government passes bill to cap public sector wage increases at 1 per cent

TORONTO - Ontario's teachers are preparing to challenge the government in court over a new law that caps all public sector wage increases. It limits those increases to one per cent a year for the next three years, which Treasury Board President Peter Beto. Bentalffy calls a "fair and time-limited approach" to eliminating the deficit. More than a million public sector workers would be affected by the bill, which applies to employees at school boards, universities and colleges, hospitals, long-term care homes and other organizations. Shortly after it passed in the legislature Thursday evening, the four major unions representing high school, elementary, Catholic and French teachers in the province issued a joint statement. "The unions are all currently in negotiations with the government for stop at nothing to impose its will, if only for ideological reasons," the president of the French teachers' union, Remi Sabourin, said in the statement. "The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms guarantees us the right to negotiate a win-win agreement, but Ford and his government are choosing to disregard that right." Although the bill passed Thursday evening, it is retroactive to June 5, which was first announced. Most of the province's teachers are already gearing up for a potential strike, as they say even at the bargaining table there is no real movement. Elementary and high school teachers could be in a legal strike position later this month, and teachers in the English Catholic system are in the process of holding strike votes. A strike by the Canadian Union of Public Employees' 55,000 education workers was narrowly averted last month after they reached a deal that includes one per cent salary increases for three years. Education Minister Stephen Lecce has said the other unions should be reasonable like CUPE. The government said the wage cap bill respects the bargaining process, and noted that it still allows for performance or increased qualifications. "Taking action to ensure increases in public sector compensation reflect the province's fiscal reality is part of our government's balanced and prudent plan," Bentalffy said in a statement.

Ontario father faces first-degree murder charges in deaths of two boys, aged 9 and 12

Police have not released the cause of death and said it was not immediately apparent to investigators that they were dealing with homicides. BRAMPTON, Ont. - Officers responding to a late-night medical call from a Toronto-area home discovered the bodies of two boys, police said Thursday as they charged the children's father with murder. Edwin Bastidas, 52, was arrested and charged with two counts of first-degree murder, Peel Regional Police said. Const. Heather Cannon said investigators are not seeking any other suspects in the case that has shocked the Brampton, Ont., community where the family lived. Police have not released the cause of death and said it was not immediately apparent to investigators that they were dealing with homicides. "When we attended, we didn't find any obvious signs of trauma to the children," Cannon said. "It was a little bit later on that it was determined to be a suspicious death in both cases." Cannon said someone in the residence called 911 late Wednesday on what was described as a medical call. The boys, aged nine and 12, were found dead inside the home. Cannon couldn't say where in the residence they were found, or who else was home at the time. The deaths occurred on an otherwise quiet suburban street. Neighbours driving to work Thursday paused to peer at the crime scene taped off by police. Paul Rodrigues said one of his sons knew one of the boys and went to the same school. He also said his wife was good friends with the mother of the children and frequently went for coffee with her. "I'm just in shock," Rodrigues said on Thursday. He called the victims "regular boys" and said their names were Jonathan and Nicholas. They walked their dog and played with their daughter in front of his house, Rodrigues said. An older sister lived in the basement, he said. Another area resident, Sam Mammen, said the neighbourhood has always been a safe place. He said he didn't know the family but had seen the boys walking by. "This is the first time something like this has happened," Mammen said. "Very sad to hear." Sudhama Swamy, who also lives nearby, called the occurrence very rare in a "very quiet, lovely neighbourhood" that has three schools and lots of children who walk around or play outside.

After playing the queen of Jhansi, Manikarnika, now the stellar actress Kangana Ranaut is all set to play yet another powerful woman on the big screen. This time around it is the late political leader, Jayalalitha. The actress will play the lead in the biopic Thalivi, directed by Vijay. Yesterday a picture was released on the internet of the clipboard from the sets of the film suggesting that the film has finally gone on floors. The film stars Arvind Swami alongside Kangana Ranaut. Thalivi will be made in three languages - Hindi, Tamil and Telugu. Kangana had been preparing for the film for a long time and now finally she has begun shooting for the project. Kangana's look from the film has been kept under wraps as the makers have a plan to release it in a big way. Few days back, the actress was in LA for the prosthetics and what we hear is that the first look of the film will come as a big surprise for everyone.

Kangana Ranaut's next release is going to be Ashwini Yyer Tiwari's Panga which hits the theatres on January 24, 2020 and the actress has already announced her 2020 Diwali release, Dhakad. Keep watching this space for more on Bollywood.

Mangeshkar was admitted to the Intensive Care Unit of the Breach Candy hospital in the early hours of Monday after she complained of breathing difficulties, hospital sources said. She, who turned 90 on September 28, is in a critical condition, they said. "She was brought to hospital at about 2 am. She is critical and in ICU," a hospital insider told PTI.

Mangeshkar's niece Kachana Shah said the singer is recovering. "She was down with a viral infection. She is on path to recovery," Shah told PTI. In a career spanning over seven decades, the Indo-born Mangeshkar has lent her voice to thousands of songs in over 1,000 Hindi films as well as in various regional and foreign languages. The indefatigable Mangeshkar recorded her last song this year. "Saugandh mujhe is mitti ki" was released on March 30 as a tribute to the Indian Army. Her last full album in 2004 was "Veer-Zara" when she was 75. She started her journey as a playback singer in 1942 with Vasant Joglekar's Marathi movie "Kitti Hassal". Her first song to release was "Natali chaitraich navala" from "Pahili Mangal-gaur". She also acted in the movie. Mangeshkar was awarded the Bharat Ratna, the highest civilian honour in the country, in 2001. She was given the Dadashah Award in 1989.

Shafali Verma, Smriti Mandhana star in India's 84-run win over WI in first T20I

Gros Islet: Opening duo of Shafali Verma and Smriti Mandhana hammered scintillating half-centuries as the Indian women's team notched up a comfortable 84-run win over hosts West Indies in the first T20I here. The 15-year-old Shafali and Mandhana shared a record 143-run opening partnership in India posted 185 for 4 in their stipulated 20 overs at the Darren Sammy National Cricket Stadium here.

The visitors then returned to restrict West Indies for 101 for 0 to complete the win on Saturday. Pacer Shikha Pandey (2/22), spin duo of Radha Yadav (2/10) and Poonam Yadav (2/24) claimed two wickets each, while both Deepthi Sharma (1/15) and Poja Vastrakar (1/21) accounted for one wicket. Put into bat, Shafali, playing only her fifth T20I, smashed six boundaries and four sixes to notch up her maiden international half-century. Mandhana too matched her younger partner, smashing 11 fours in her 46-half innings as India cruised to 102 for no loss in 10 overs. The duo recorded the highest partnership for any wicket by an Indian pair in T20Is, bettering the 130 amassed by Thirush Kamini and Purnam Raut against Bangladesh in 2013. Shafali was the first to go when she was dismissed by Shakeri Selman in the 16th over. Skipper Harmanpreet Kaur then produced a 13-ball 21, while Veda Krishnamurthy provided the late charge with a 7-ball 15 to take India to a challenging score. For the hosts, Selman and Anisa Mohammad snared two wickets each, while Hayley Matthews conceded 39 runs from her four overs and Christine Henry bled 26 from the only over she bowled.

Dwayne Bravo slams former West Indies cricket boss

Dwayne Bravo, the former West Indies all-rounder, has lashed out at the previous administration while criticizing the Phil Simmons-coached current side for their ODI series win over Afghanistan on Saturday night. The ODI series win is West Indies' first since they defeated Bangladesh 3-0 in the Caribbean in 2014. "Congratulations to the team. It has been five years since we have not won an ODI series and the boys have now done this. I am a former West Indies cricketer but I may soon come out of international retirement. Let me tell you all that you can't think that West Indies cricket is now back to where we want it to be. What we have here are the right people in the right places and we are pointing in the right direction." The Trinidad Guardian quoted Bravo saying in a video message to the team.

Kieron Pollard's West Indies beat Afghanistan by 47 runs on Saturday when they restricted Afghanistan's chase to 200 after scoring 247-9 in 50 overs. "The win was obviously a celebratory one meant to laud the current team's effort. Bravo could not resist taking a jab at the previous regime, which was led by Cameron," said the newspaper. "West Indies cricket has suffered at the hands of vindictive people who were bent on keeping certain people away from the team, ending many careers. However, there is a God and every rope has an end. The longest rope in the world has an end and it is good to see. These are the same players but what they have different now is that there is a change at the very top and this has caused a lot of positives," Bravo said.

Nagpur T20I: Shivam Dube, Deepak Chahar guide India to 30-run win over Bangladesh

Nagpur: Deepak Chahar's six-wicket haul and Shivam Dube's three-wicket haul helped India to defeat Bangladesh by 30 runs on Sunday in the final T20I of the three-match series at the Vidarbha Cricket Association Stadium. With this win, India won the three-match series 2-1. The bowling figures of 6-7 by Chahar are the best recorded by a bowler in the T20I format. Chahar also took a hat-trick in the match as he dismissed one batsman on the last ball of the 18th over and then he dismissed two batsmen in the opening two balls of the 20th over. Chasing 175, Bangladesh lost Liton Das (9) and Soumya Sarkar (0) on successive deliveries in the third over as Deepak Chahar sent both batsmen back to the pavilion. Indian bowlers were able to maintain a stranglehold over their opponents and as a result, Bangladesh could only score 33/12 in the first six overs.

Canadian Housing Market Rebounds in September

Canada's housing market continues to rebound this fall from last winter's chill.

The Canadian Real Estate Association (CREA) reported that benchmark prices rose 0.5% in September from August, and 1.3% year-over-year. The aggregate benchmark price for the 19 cities CREA tracks is now $629,200. The benchmark is the best metric we have for measuring "typical" house prices because it eliminates outliers at the top and bottom of the market. In comparison, the average home price rose 5.3% year-over-year to $515,500.

"In recent months, home prices have generally been stabilizing in the Lower Mainland and the Prairies, where previously they were falling. Meanwhile, price growth has begun to rebound among markets in the Greater Golden Horseshoe (GGH), regaining the ongoing price gains in housing markets located further east," CREA says.

Cities in British Columbia and the Prairies were the only ones to post declines, with the Lower Mainland down 6.4%, Greater Vancouver down 7.28% and Fraser Valley down 4.68%. Calgary (-2.36%), Edmonton

(-2.25%), Regina (-3.95%) and Saskatoon (-1.13%) were all also in a slump.

The difference between the two regions, however, is that prices in B.C. had more than doubled over the past five years prior to its downturn. The Prairies have seen a much more sustained downturn due to falling oil prices and a severe oversupply of housing.

The housing markets on the other side of the country have followed a very different trajectory. Nearly all markets in Ontario and the Maritimes rose significantly, both over the past year and also over the past five years. Greater Toronto, for example, is up 5.02% year-over-year and 57.02% over five years; Ottawa is up 9.61% year-over-year and up 28.58% from five years ago, and Greater Moncton is up 5.76% from last year and 23% from September 2014.

The difference in fortunes between East and West seems to be one of basic economics: the balance between supply and demand.

"The number of months of inventory has swollen far beyond long-term averages in Prairie provinces and Newfoundland & Labrador, giving homebuyers ample choice in these regions," CREA noted. "By contrast, the measure is running well below long-term averages in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime provinces, resulting in increased competition among buyers for listings and providing fertile ground for price gains."

Sales simply continue to outpace new listings. National home sales rose 15.5% year-over-year, up from a six-year low reached in February 2018, but below the peaks reached in 2016 and 2017.

Meanwhile, sellers still appear hesitant to put their house on the market - new listings edged up less than 1%. The sales-to-new listings ratio, which measures competition, keeps rising and now stands at 61.3%, well above its long-term average of 53.6%.

That indicates the housing market is becoming increasingly tough for prospective buyers, who are competing with more buyers for fewer available properties. That can lead to price increases, bidding wars and pressure to leave out conditions in offers.

Until supply increases (or demand wanes), CREA expects long-term price gains in British Columbia, Ontario and the Maritimes.

Conservatives to try to force Trudeau's hand on western alienation

The Conservatives warned on Sunday that they will use every measure available to force the Trudeau government to bend to their demands over western alienation.

Calgary Nose Hill MP Michelle Rempel Garner said the interests of western provinces, such as Alberta and Saskatchewan, will be priority number one in the next session of Parliament - but she didn't shed further light on what tools her party would rely on to achieve their goal other than to say "stay tuned."

"Justin Trudeau has not come close to seeing the force of three million mobilized Albertans actively opposing his policies and actively showing the country the consequences of a unity crisis," Rempel Garner said. "So my message to him is giddy up."

The message came a day after Alberta Premier Jason Kenney announced his United Conservative government was seeking more autonomy for the province, a direction similar to what Quebec has taken in the past.

Under the plan, Alberta will open offices in other provinces, introduce an act to give Albertans the power to petition referendums and create an advisory panel that will travel the province to consult on decisions, such as whether the province should establish its own revenue agency and police force.

Rempel Garner called Kenney's move appropriate, and said Conservative Alberta MPs are planning a complementary response to further the province's independence and ensure it's reflected in Trudeau's next mandate. "He's going to have to deal with this as a first order of business," Rempel Garner said.

"We have many experienced members of parliament that will be using every lever possible to make the rest of the country and Justin Trudeau understand how serious we are about this."

In response to Kenney's announcement, the Prime Minister's Office issued a statement by spokesperson Chantal Gagnon, which said Trudeau "hopes to meet with all premiers one on one at the earliest opportunity to work on shared goals and make life better for all Canadians."

Trudeau meeting Scheer, Sask. premier Tuesday

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau has topped former federal cabinet Minister Anne McLellan to advise the government on the transition process.

As part of that role, McLellan, who served as an Edmonton MP under the Liberal governments of Jean meeting. Saskatchewan Premier Scott McEwen announced today that his one-on-one with Trudeau is scheduled for Tuesday in Ottawa.

"Following the election of Prime Minister Trudeau's minority government, I raised three Saskatchewan priorities that I will be emphasizing with the Prime Minister: adjusting the inequitable equalization formula, putting a one-year pause on the carbon tax so federal and provincial officials can re-evaluate Saskatchewan's plan to address climate change, and expanding market access for Saskatchewan exports," McEwen said in a written statement.

"In each case, we are proposing reasonable actions the Prime Minister and his minority government can take that will show he is prepared to address the concerns and frustrations of Saskatchewan."

Manitoba Premier Brian Pallister met with Trudeau last Friday, in which he offered friendly advice to the prime minister on how to address western anger.

"Fighting climate change is a unifying project. A political leader can divide, a prime minister cannot unite," Pallister said. "So as we move forward we should unite around fighting climate change and we should not be caught up in a subset of a subset. Carbon tax is not the only way [to deal with climate change]."

"I think there are many messages that could be taken from the federal election, but definitely one of them is that this is a country that is divided on a number of key issues right now. So unification efforts and a willingness to change one's approaches are important things."

"Status quo is not going to cut it," Rempel Garner calls the situation a "unity crisis," and has a clear set of demands for the Liberal government. "Be proud of the energy sector," said Rempel Garner.

I will raise SK's priorities on equalization, carbon tax & pipelines. In each case we're proposing reasonable actions PM can take to show he's prepared to address the concerns of SK people.

I look forward to a productive

Ontario Legislature passes Coteau's motion to affirm religious freedoms in response to Quebec's Bill 21

QUEEN'S PARK-The Ontario Legislature today passed a motion from Michael Coteau, Liberal MPP for Don Valley East, affirming the province's support of religious diversity in response to Quebec's Bill 21.

"I am pleased that all parties could come together to affirm that Ontario is a place that values diversity and stands united in support of our rights and freedoms," said Coteau.

Coteau's motion stated, "Ontario and its government shall oppose any law that would seek to restrict or limit the religious freedoms of our citizens; and, that Ontario's Legislature should affirm that we value our diversity and assert that we shall promote and protect free expression and the rights of religious minorities, consistent with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms."

"As the former Minister Responsible for Anti-Racism, I believe a critical duty of all Members of our Legislature is to recognize, embrace, promote and protect the rights of all Ontarians guaranteed under Canada's Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and I am very gratified that occurred today," said Coteau.

"Since the spring, I have spoken out about Bill 21, and today we were able to show, with solidarity and strength, a clear message to Ontarians, and to all Canadians, that this province celebrates and stands together with all our people in support of our diversity, and in defence of our rights and freedoms," Coteau concluded.
