The coronavirus disease (COVID-19) causes a respiratory infection that can involve the following symptoms:

Fever

Cough

Trouble Breathing

Protect Yourself!

Wash your hands often with lukewarm running water and soap for at least 20 seconds. Use an alcohol-based sanitizer if you do not have access to soap and water.

Stay home: do not go to school, child centres or daycares. Avoid public spaces and work from home, whenever possible.

Protect those close to you, particularly the elderly and those at greater risk for infection, by avoiding visiting them if you are feeling sick.

It is strongly recommended that all persons returning from abroad self-isolate at home for a period of 14 days and watch out for any symptoms.

'Enough is enough': Trudeau warns Canadians flouting coronavirus social distancing

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau says there is no tolerance for those flouting orders to socially distance from others in an effort to limit the spread of the novel coronavirus.

"You all think you're invincible. You're not. Enough is enough," he warned in an address to Canadians on Monday from Rideau Cottage, where he is currently in self-isolation.

"Go home and stay home."

Trudeau's warning comes as provinces and territories over the weekend threatened to roll out fines and potentially even criminal enforcement measures like arrests in order to enforce social distancing.

There were reports from across the country over the weekend of people flouting these orders by congregating in parks, beaches and other public areas despite warnings from public health officials that isolating from other people is a critical means of trying to limit the spread of the virus.

Trudeau said he will be speaking with premiers from across the country on Monday evening to discuss how they can co-ordinate to crack down on those ignoring social distancing.

"There is more that can be done, there is more that needs to be done around messaging," he said, noting that the government will be rolling out an advertising campaign aimed at driving that home.

He urged Canadians to understand that "listening [to those directives] is your duty, and staying home is your way to survive."

If Canadians do not get the message and stay home, the government could act to force them.

"We will look at different measures that could be necessary to enforce these measures. We'd rather not... I can tell you that we haven't taken anything off the table from the Emergencies Act, new and existing measures under the Quarantine Act," Trudeau continued.

"We are impressing upon Canadians to do this of their own will."

Deputy Prime Minister Chrystia Freeland and Chief Public Health Officer Dr. Theresa Tam echoed those calls during a ministerial press conference shortly after Trudeau spoke to reporters.

"Canadians must practice social and physical distancing," urged Freeland. "That means stay at home unless you are doing essential work like stocking grocery stores, staffing pharmacies and providing medical care."

Tam said "unrelenting social distancing" is needed in order to slow community spread of the virus.

On Sunday, Trudeau announced the House of Commons will reconvene on Tuesday to pass legislation which includes an $82-billion aid package - to support Canadians impacted by the novel coronavirus outbreak.

Trudeau said the government is working closely with provinces and territories in the fight against COVID-19, the disease caused by the virus, but that Canada is not at the point where the Emergencies Act needs to be invoked.

On Saturday, Trudeau said the government is working with commercial airlines in order to repatriate Canadians stranded abroad.

The first of those flights - from Casablanca, Morocco - landed in Montreal on Saturday.

Trudeau said the government is working to secure flights to other locations, including Peru and Spain, in the coming days but said the government will not be able to help all Canadian-seeking assistance.

Canada's Foreign Affairs Minister François-Philippe Champagne said officials have been in touch with "hundreds of thousands" of Canadians abroad and are "working around the clock" to provide help.

According to the Public Health Agency of Canada (PHAC), by 6 p.m. ET on Sunday, more than 1,400 cases of the virus had been confirmed in the country, with the majority reported in Ontario and B.C.

Prime Minister announces Canada's Plan to Mobilize Industry to fight COVID-19

The COVID-19 outbreak continues to evolve rapidly, and the government is mobilizing Canadian businesses and manufacturers to help fight the spread of the virus and protect the health and safety of all Canadians.

The Prime Minister, Justin Trudeau, today announced Canada's Plan to Mobilize Industry to fight COVID-19, which will create pathways to deploy resources to domestic manufacturers and businesses so they can help during this critical time.

The Plan introduces new measures to directly support these businesses to rapidly scale up production or re-tool their manufacturing lines to develop products made in Canada that will help in the fight against COVID-19. These products could include critical health and safety supplies and equipment, including personal protective equipment, sanitization products, diagnostic and testing products, and disease tracking technology.

The Plan builds on the Government of Canada's more than $1 billion COVID-19 Response Fund and the support that has been provided to our health care system since the beginning of the outbreak. It focuses on domestic capacity building, innovative solutions, and procurement of essential supplies. It will:

- Build the industrial capability needed to manufacture critical supplies at scale in Canada. This will be done either by re-tooling the manufacturing lines of existing Canadian businesses or rapidly scaling up the production of others that already produce these products.
- Refocus Canada's existing industrial and innovation programs, by adding to their mandate a requirement that they prioritize the fight against COVID-19. This includes:

- The Strategic Innovation Fund to deliver direct support to Canadian companies for large-scale projects
- A National Research Council of Canada to expedite research and development with small and medium-sized enterprises
- Innovation Superclusters to tap into a national network of 1,800 members, and Innovative Solutions Canada to help companies commercialize products more quickly
- Deliver direct support to key Canadian companies that are working on large-scale and later-stage research and development projects aimed, in the immediate term, at producing commodities to COVID-19.
- Challenge innovative companies to develop research-based solutions, technologies, and products that can address a variety of COVID-19 issues.
- Source equipment needed to support Canada's response to COVID-19 here in Canada. The Government of Canada will use existing supply arrangements and innovative, flexible procurement approaches. It is also reaching out to suppliers to identify and purchase equipment, supplies, and services needed for Canada's response to minimize the health, economic, and social impacts of the COVID-19 outbreak, which includes $50 million to help ensure adequate supplies of personal protective equipment for provinces and territories, as well as to address federal needs.

The Strategic Innovation Fund will allow for rapid support to Canadian companies that are working on large-scale and later-stage promising research and development projects aimed at providing medical countermeasures to COVID-19, including vaccines and critical medical supplies.

The National Research Council of Canada will organize a COVID-19 Challenge Program, composed of teams of government, academic and private sector partners to address a range of medium term needs of the Public Health Agency of Canada and Health Canada. These include personal protective equipment, sanitization products, diagnostic and testing products, therapeutics, and disease tracking technology.

Bank of Canada restates authority to buy company debt

The Bank of Canada restated its authority to buy corporate and municipal bonds, according to a public notice by the central bank last week.

Governor Stephen Poloz issued a restatement of the Bank of Canada's policy in the Canada Gazette on March 13 on policies for purchasing securities, that includes the right to buy the debt of companies and municipalities when it is "addressing a situation of financial system stress that could have material macroeconomic consequences."

The central bank may be forced to begin quantitative easing program for the first time in history, analysts say, as the country contends with a dramatic rise in unemployment.

Bank economists now expect the Canadian economy to shrink between 10% and 24% on an annualized basis, a recession deeper than the worst of the 2008-09 financial crisis. Many see it as inevitable that Poloz and his governing council will cut the overnight rate to near zero, then start ratcheting deeper into it.

"We think the bank will be forced to adopt QE and that they'll look to ultimately buy up to C$150 billion in securities," said TD Securities macro strategist Robert Both in an email.

"We think it is a question of when and not if."

Sharp Economic Slide
Quantitative easing, which sees central banks buy government bonds as part of an effort to keep borrowing costs low for a prolonged period of time, of Treasury bonds and mortgage-backed securities to suppress borrowing costs and ease the flow of credit amid a historic economic shock.

The Bank of Canada's governing council often distances itself from monetary policy decisions south of the border. But the Fed's move opens the door to a more robust response from Canadian policy-makers.

"The Bank of Canada doesn't like being pushed by the Fed, but now it's global," said Benjamin Reitzes, an economist at Bank of Montreal, which sees an 80% chance the central bank will need to start quantitative easing.

"The question is why they'd wait until April - given the broad shutdowns it's already clear that conditions have deteriorated sharply," he said.

While Poloz said last week that other options are on the table, he made it clear the measures the bank has taken so far - including topping the purchases of mortgage-backed securities - don't constitute quantitative easing.

"The programs the bank has introduced are very important in unlocking funding markets," Ian Pollock, global head of non-equity market research at Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce. "The problem is, liquidity is so distressed that they are not working as planned. They need to bring out the Canadian bazooka," adding that he's certain the central bank will "imminently" launch QE.

"I have seen and heard far too many instances of people socializing with friends and families at playgrounds and in our parks and not maintaining safe distances of 2 metres or more," said Mississauga Mayor Bonnie Crombie in a statement. "Enough is enough."

Premier Doug Ford's government has already declared a state of emergency of the eve and on Monday demanded all "non-essential" businesses to close by the end of Tuesday. Ford said his government would reveal later what businesses would be forced to shutter.

Toronto has been the epicentre of the province's coronavirus cases. Toronto public health said there were 230 cases of COVID-19 reported in Toronto on Sunday afternoon, while many more cases in the surrounding Greater Toronto Area.

One person has died, and eleven others have been hospitalized, the city says. To date, there have been five other people diagnosed with COVID-19 who have recovered, according to public health.

Tory said that Toronto is strong, and admired the world over for its resiliency.

"Have sense of hope about this," he said. "This is a great city full of strong, resilient people."

Coronavirus: Canada refuses to send athletes to Tokyo Olympics unless Games postponed

Canada won't have a team at this summer's Tokyo Olympics unless the Games are postponed - a bold move that would at least give Canadian athletes some sense of direction in the coming months.

The Canadian Olympic Committee and Canadian Paralympic Committee issued joint statements Sunday evening saying that they refuse to send their teams to Tokyo unless their respective Games are pushed back, and are advocating for a year.

"While we recognize the inherent complexities around a postponement, nothing is more important than the health and safety of our athletes and the world community," the COC said in its statement.

"This is not solely about athlete health - it is about public health. With COVID-19 and the associated risks, it is not safe for our athletes, and the health and safety of their families and the broader Canadian community for athletes to continue training towards these Games."

The Tokyo Olympics are scheduled to start July 24 with the Paralympics slated to follow on Aug. 25.

"It's been a whirlwind week. I qualified for Tokyo last Saturday, officially purchasing my ticket and now a week later, it's like for sure we're not going no matter what. Hopefully the IOC will postpone for a year."

Two-time Olympic trampolining champion Rosie MacLennan sits on the COC's athletes commission. She knows it will be difficult for Canada's athletes if the Tokyo Games go ahead without them, but says the current pandemic is more important than high-performance sport.

"I think it's the responsible decision to make, even though it might be hard to feel we're missing out on that opportunity, I know in my heart that it is one hundred per cent the right thing to do," MacLennan said.

Six-time Olympian Hayley Wickenheiser, who serves on the International Olympic Committee's athletes commission, believes the majority of athletes support the decision of the COC and the CPC.

The retired hockey player and winner of four Olympic gold medals, who is currently in medical school, hopes other countries follow Canada's lead.

"I think in this country athletes today made a very unselfish decision," Wickenheiser said.

"Not only for themselves, but for the rest of the sporting world, so that others that aren't as brave can have a chance to step up and say 'we really want to do the same thing' and that's what we'll see."

"A decision had to be made. Training in limbo was not a smart thing to keep doing. Athletes will push through anything and find a way. It's no longer safe or ethical to ask athletes to do that."

Canada's statement joins a growing chorus of critics around the International Olympic Committee's response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

The Australian Olympic Committee has told its athletes in a statement on its website they should prepare for the Tokyo Games in 2021.

IOC president Thomas Bach said earlier Sunday the global organization is considering options including postponement, and a decision will be delayed.

Canceling the Games entirely, Bach said, is not being considered. It was the first time since the COVID-19 pandemic began that the IOC admitted it would consider other options.

Canadian athletes had mixed feelings about Bach's four-week deadline - relief that outright cancellation wasn't being considered, but anxiety still around the uncertainty of the Olympics amid a global health emergency that has brought the sports world to its knees.

"It's nerve-wracking, you want to know when it's going to happen," said Britanny Crew, the Canadian record-holder in women's shot put.

"It's pretty clear to me as an athlete at this point that it's not going to be happening as planned," said boxer Mandy Bujold, a two-time Pan American Games champion.

"It is going to take time to decide on the best alternative. I personally do hope it's a new date and not a complete cancellation."

Canadian para-triathlete and world champion Stefan Daniel agrees with the CPC's position even if the Tokyo Games happen without him.

"I know how tough these calls are to make," the 23-year-old Calgary said. "I stand by this decision."

"Health and safety are first and foremost. If the home and the Games are going on, I'll be safe. It will be tough, but we'll be ready for the next games."

Brent Lakatos, an 11-time world champion in wheelchair racing, was happy the IOC set a deadline for its decision.

"I understand they need more time to make a decision on what to do," he said. "But with the trajectory of things these days, I can't imagine they will do anything other than postpone."

Criticism of the IOC's stance has grown in recent days.

Both governing bodies for track and field and swimming in the United States have called on their Olympic officials to push for a postponement, and Swimming Canada later backed its American counterpart.

National Olympic committees in Brazil, Slovenia and Norway are among those pushing for a postponement until the global health crisis subsides.

"The last week or so there has been a little bit of a groundswell... calling for postponement, and then you see the IOC had held fairly firm and that kind of left everything sort of up in the air you didn't really know what to believe," said Scott Topper, captain of Canada's men's field hockey team.

"To have kind of a timeline now is a little bit comforting."

With countless cancellations, only 57 per cent of Olympic qualification spots have been determined.

Since the first modern Olympics in Athens in 1896, the Games have only been cancelled during the world wars including 1916, 1940 and 1944.

There have been three major boycotts, in 1976 in Montreal, 1980, and 1984.

There have been more than 330,000 cases of coronavirus around the world, with more than 14,000 deaths.

"There is a dramatic increase in cases and new outbreaks of COVID-19 in different countries on different continents," the IOC said.

"This led the (board) to the conclusion that the IOC needs to take the next step in its scenario-planning."

Toronto's mayor declares state of emergency amid COVID-19 pandemic

Mayor John Tory has declared a state of emergency for the city of Toronto amid the coronavirus pandemic.

"This move comes as public health officials in Ontario have confirmed 78 new cases of COVID-19, raising the province's total to 503.

Declaring a state of emergency gives Tory the power to make decisions without council votes. Tory, who is currently in self-isolation after travelling to England on a business trip, held a news conference Monday afternoon.

"The mayor said that despite orders to practice social distancing, some people are still skirting advice from public health and 'just don't get it.'"

"This is behaviour that is selfish... and it cannot continue," he said in a statement issued Monday, the city said the declaration will allow local government to respond quickly to the pandemic and "any other events that arise in the weeks ahead."

By declaring an emergency in Toronto, the city can take bolder actions to keep people apart on playgrounds and other city-owned spaces, Tory said.

Misstatements announced Monday that it is closing playgrounds, sport courts, skateboard parks and leash-free zones in a similar move.

Kanika Kapoor stayed in the Lucknow hotel the same time as the South African cricket team before testing positive for COVID-19

Bollywood singer Kanika Kapoor on Friday shared on social media that she had tested positive for COVID-19. The singer had a travel history to London and returned to India on March 9. She came to Lucknow from Mumbai and reportedly attended three parties while in the city.

According to recent reports, Kanika Kapoor was staying at the same hotel in Lucknow where the South Africa cricket team was also staying for their ODI match against India. The reports further state that she dined in the hotel's buffet and also attended several guests in the lobby. The South African cricket team was also staying at the hotel during the same period for a match against India which was later called off.

Currently, a team of experts is scanning the video footage of a news channel's annual conclave she attended and CCTV records of the Lucknow hotel to identify the people she came in contact with. Kanika Kapoor stayed in the hotel from March 14 to March 16. In her Instagram post on March 20, she Alaya F: Stay Home, Stay Isolated, Stay Safe!

At a time, when the entire world is making sure to do their bit in order to curb the spread of coronavirus, our 'girl of the moment' made sure she does her bit by putting up a strong message on her social media. With great power comes great responsibility and Alaya F sure knows that very well.

The promising debutant took to her social media and posted a story saying, "Stay home, stay isolated, stay safe! Social distancing is the key to curb coronavirus. Let's support the ongoing #AmataCurfew today, 22nd March from 7 am to 9 pm. #NoDinIghtCorona".

Millions of people across the country are staying indoors where streets were a deserted look and here number of vehicles were on the road on Sunday in an unprecedented shutdown on Prime Minister Narendra Modi's appeal for a 'Janata curfew' to help check the spread of coronavirus.

Owing a wide fanbase with the reach of a celebrity appeal, Alaya F's message to her fans definitely adds to this larger appeal to the citizens of the nation. Alaya has always been a popular name but her phenomenal debut with Jawani Jaanmama has made her a star to look out for and with a time like this in view, she doesn't shy away from expressing and upholding her responsibility which makes her a star!

Well, stay indoors and stay safe as the very beautiful Alaya F makes sure to tell!

they can stick to the schedule because she already has two other projects that she's working on. She even said that all her commitments have been pushed to April since she was supposed to be shooting every day during this time and that this is the longest break of her life.

Rakul Preet Singh says this is the longest break of her life

Amidst the Coronavirus scare, the shoots of all entertainment portals were stopped abruptly after it claimed the first life in Maharashtra. However, due to her commitments, Rakul Preet Singh could not cancel the shoot of an advertisement and shared a group picture from the sets. The actress is known for her dedication and commitment towards her profession and made sure to take the necessary precautionary measures during the day.

In her recent interaction with a leading tabloid, Rakul revealed that there was a doctor present on the set and the crew was of limited people. Considering the situation, no one except her entourage was allowed to access her vanity and going back home felt like going to war. The actress is, however, safe and is practicing social distancing like the rest of them. She further revealed how she was supposed to begin shooting for her next titled Thank God with Ajay Devgn and Sidhant Malhotra on April 10. But they are not sure if

PCB Pulls Up Mohammad Hafeez For Tweet About Sharjeel Khan

The Pakistan Cricket Board has reprimanded Mohammad Hafeez for questioning the tainted Sharjeel Khan's return to the game, saying the senior all-rounder should be "focusing on his own game" instead of criticizing fellow players or making comments on the PCB's policies.

The 39-year-old Hafeez on Saturday questioned PCB's decision to offer Sharjeel another chance to play for the national team after completing a two and a half year ban for spot-fixing.

It led to a debate on the PCB's policy on allowing tainted players back in the national team. "Current players should not be going up on social media to criticize other players or talk about what policies the cricket board should or shouldn't have," PCB CEO Wasim Khan was quoted as saying by 'ESPNCricinfo'. "They can have their opinions about various things about world cricket and cricket in general but not about the rights and wrongs of players and the boards and they should leave that to cricket board trustees."

Sharjeel was slapped with a five-year ban for his role in the 2017 Pakistan Super League corruption scandal but the Board suspended his sentence following an "unconditional apology" in August 2019, clearing his return. Sharjeel soon turned up for Karachi Kings at this year's PSL.

Hafeez, who had also resisted the comeback of Muhammad Asim to the Pakistan camp some years back, wrote on his twitter page: "Shouldn't we set standards of dignity and pride higher than any other 'Sixes Talent' to represent Pakistan. Just Asking."

Wasim said Hafeez should be focusing on his own game instead of talking about "right and wrong" of other players. "I will be personally speaking to Mohammad Hafeez about that and I don't think it's his place to be doing it. No other player in the world does that so why should our Pakistani players do that? I don't think they have any space to do that and I don't think they should be doing that. That's my personal view," he said. "My view is, he should focus on his own game, focus on the cricketering opinion he can give but don't give personal opinion about other players." On Friday, the PCB had issued a show cause notice to another Test batsman Umar Akmal for breaching the anti-corruption code by not reporting approaches to spot-fix.

Canada announces it will not send athletes to Tokyo 2020 Olympics

Canada will not be participating in the Tokyo 2020 Olympics this summer due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

The Canadian Olympic Committee (COC) and Canadian Paralympic Commission (CPC) made the announcement Sunday evening, backed by their Athletes' Commissions, and national Sports Organizations and the Government of Canada.

"This is not solely about athlete health - it is about public health," the COC said in a media release. "With COVID-19 and the associated risks, it is not safe for our athletes, and the health and safety of their families and the broader Canadian community for athletes to continue training towards these Games. In fact, it runs counter to the public health advice which we urge all Canadians to follow."

The COC is urging the International Olympic Committee (IOC), the International Paralympic Committee (IPC), and the World Health Organization (WHO) to postpone the Games for one year due to ongoing concerns regarding the coronavirus. Tokyo is supposed to host the 2020 Olympics from July 24 to August 9.

"While we recognize the inherent complexities around a postponement, nothing is more important than the health and safety of our athletes and the world community," the COC added.

"We also applaud the IOC for acknowledging that safeguarding the health and wellness of nations and containing the virus must be our paramount concern. We are in the midst of a global health crisis that is far more significant than sport."

The IOC indicated for the first time earlier today that it was seriously considering postponing the Games. That's what UFA decided to do last week, when it rescheduled the Euro 2020 international soccer tournament until June 2021.

Kieron Pollard: Players Should Use This Break To Introspect, Stay Fit

West Indies' limited-over skipper Kieron Pollard believes the break brought upon them by the COVID-19 pandemic is a good time to "introspect" about careers and players should use it to "stay mentally and physically fit".

The coronavirus outbreak, which has claimed over 120,000 lives and infected more than 250,000 globally, has led to the cancellation and postponement of all sports activities across the world. Pollard said it is a good time to reflect on his own's game.

"It is a good time for introspection, a good time for reflection, a good time to look at where you are as an individual in your career and what you want to achieve going forward," he was quoted as saying by Jamaica Gleaner. Pollard, who was ruled out of the Pakistan Super League due to a niggle in his right thigh early this month, said it is time to work on his fitness and prepare for the season ahead.

"You have to take this time in order to do that and also keep yourself in good physical shape, and mentally as well, because when the ball rings and they say 'ok, everything is back to normal and we need to go on tour', it might not be enough time to be prepared, but you as an individual have to be prepared mentally in order for you to try to perform at your best," he said.

Cricket West Indies (CWI) had recently delayed the domestic season by a month in the wake of the deadly disease. On Friday, the England and Wales Cricket Board (ECB) suspended all professional cricket till May 28, indicating the start of the new season. West Indies were scheduled to play a three-Test series from June 4, following warm-up matches against England Lions and Wanderers on May 23 and 28, respectively.
