کورونا سے کیڑیا کی زندگی کی سال کے لیے تبدیل ہو جائے گی: مہرزدو

کورونا جیسا کہ پہلا دنیا کی تاریخ میں پہلا ہیجینا کا وائرس تھا۔ اگرچہ یہ آج کے ہیجینا کی نسبت زیادہ خطرناک ہے۔

یہ بھی ہے کہ ہائیجینا سے بچنے کے لیے ہمیں کئی کام کرنا پڑیں گے۔ پھر اس کی نگرانی کو سنجیدگی سے کرنا پڑے گا۔

PM Trudeau says COVID-19 will change life in Canada for 'years'

Waiting for life to return to pre-pandemic normal? It won't. OTTAWA -- Prime Minister Justin Trudeau says that "normal" is a "long way off" for all Canadians - and that some differences implemented as a result of lessons learned during this pandemic will last for "years."

"If we want life to get back to the way it was exactly before, it won't," Trudeau said, speaking to reporters from the front steps of Rideau Cottage on Monday.

"There will be differences, even a few years from now, that we will have learned from dealing with this global pandemic that I think will be important lessons."

His comments come as the prime minister is working with the provinces to establish a set of guidelines for reopening to any semblance of normal public life. Trudeau said those guidelines will include ensuring effective contact tracing for cases of COVID-19 and an assurance that provinces have enough personal protective equipment.

Still, some provinces are forging ahead with announcements of more precise timelines for their own reopenings.

Saskatchewan Premier Scott Moe took the plunge last Thursday, laying out his five-step plan that includes golf courses reopening in mid-May, Ontario Premier Doug Ford and Quebec Premier Francois Legault also announced their provincial reopening plans on Monday.

"As we move forward over the coming months, we will be able to see careful reopenings in certain sectors of the economy, certain things being allowed as people try to get back to something a little more like normal," Trudeau said.

Still, Trudeau warned that without a vaccine or a treatment that reduces the disease's lethality, Canadians will have to continue to be very careful.

"That caution will remain because at any time, if we loosen our measures too much, we could find ourselves back in a tremendous spike," Trudeau said.

"Historians remember from the 1918 Spanish Flu epidemic that the spring was pretty bad, but the fall was much worse. We need to stay vigilant every step of the way."

Deputy Prime Minister Chrystia Freeland, speaking to reporters on Monday, also echoed Trudeau's remarks that the reopening of Canada's economy will be undertaken with caution.

"We are actively discussing reopening plans with our provincial and territorial partners. I want to reassure Canadians that this process will be gradual, it will be collaborative, and it will be guided by science and our obligation to protect the health and safety of Canadians," Freeland said.

Chief Public Health Officer Dr. Theresa Tam acknowledged on Monday that she and many other Canadians might be feeling like a kid on a long car drive, asking whether we've arrived at our destination yet.

"I'm sorry to say we are not quite there yet, and though we are getting closer all the time, we can't let go of the wheel yet," Tam said.

Coronavirus infections are easing in Ontario and Quebec, so far Canada's worst-hit provinces.

New Brunswick and Saskatchewan, nearly unaffected by the global pandemic, announced plans last week to cautiously reopen.

It's tempting to look for good news in the graph below, but the University of Toronto's Colin Furness sees reason for caution in the upticks in Alberta and B.C. in recent days.

"Once you have flattened, you then get little brush fires. And when your case count goes very low, a small brush fire becomes significant," he wrote in an exchange of emails.

"All the upticks provide a cautionary tale for reopening," he warns. "This virus wants to go everywhere, and given the opportunity, it will do so. We need to knock down community spread altogether if we don't want to have it coming roaring back."

Across Canada, governments are feeling pressure to reopen parts of their societies.

Saskatchewan has opened some medical services and previously closed outdoor activities. New Brunswick now allows two different households to spend physical time with each other.

On Monday, Ontario announced a plan for reopening the province by stages, each taking two to four weeks, as officials decide whether the virus was returning.

In each stage, limitations on workplaces and gatherings would be progressively relaxed, though the government cautions that the province could delay going on to the next stage.

Coronavirus outbreak: Trudeau says federal government will not 'check' or 'oversee' provinces as they lift COVID-19 restrictions

There is no clear commitment about opening schools and daycares;

Room for hope - but also warning - in Canada's flattening coronavirus curve

The document says only that "the government recognizes the important needs of both parents and children in relation to public health decisions about how and when to open child care centres."

Quebec, on the other hand, said Monday that will open schools and daycares in mid-May.

Ontario would not commit to a specific timeline.

"I don't want to go out there and start setting dates, then we see a spike and then we have to slow things down," premier Doug Ford said Monday.

"Let's get it right the first time, and then we'll be able to have a better idea. Hopefully we will start to see the numbers come down in the next couple of weeks."

One crucial question is: how would we know if a reopening had been a mistake?

Furness thinks we would need far better surveillance of the virus in place before we could responsibly start relaxing restrictions on society.

"Widespread testing is key for reopening," he writes.

"If we make a mistake, it may take more than a month to notice, at which time we will have a new infection point (i.e. sudden, rapid rise). At that point, we'd have to start all over again."

It would be better to have "very widespread" testing in place for people at the highest risk, he says: not just health-care workers but others, such as prison guards and grocery store workers, he says.

Lays Out Plan to Restart Economy as Covid Outbreak Peaks

It could be August before Ontario's economy is fully back in business after the coronavirus pandemic eases, a time frame that depends heavily on the province seeing a continued decline in cases.

Premier Doug Ford outlined a gradual, phased approach to getting Canada's largest provincial economy back to work that relies on criteria set out by the chief officer of health.

The details were vague and Ford committed to no hard dates or plans for specific industries. The plan has three stages and each will be monitored for two to four weeks before the next stage can begin.

"In the first stage, select workplaces that can modify their operations 'to meet public health guidance' will be allowed to open, along with some outdoor spaces like parks. Some non-urgent and scheduled surgeries will be allowed."

"Stage two would see the opening of some service industries and additional office and retail workplaces, as well as larger public gatherings."

In stage three, all workplaces would be open and restrictions on public gatherings would be further relaxed.

"We aren't going to be rushed into anything," Ford said at a news conference in Toronto on Monday.

"The health and well-being of the province is the No. 1 priority."

Pandemic at its Peak Provincial officials outlined the criteria they are watching before giving the green light. They include a consistent decrease in the number of new daily Covid-19 cases; sufficient acute and critical care capacity in hospitals; and improved testing and contact tracing. The province wants a system where health officials can reach, within one day, about 90% of the contacts of suspected Covid-19 cases. Canada's provinces began last week outlining plans to get their shuttered economies reopened. Saskatchewan has announced plans to reopen in phases starting on May 4 while New Brunswick is now allowing outdoor activities. Quebec said some schools would reopen on May 11.

Canada had 47,316 confirmed Covid-19 cases as of Monday morning and 892 deaths. Ontario makes up about 31% of the cases and 34% of the deaths, the second-most affected province after Quebec.

The pandemic is seen as peaking in Ontario about now, according to health officials.

"Turning on an economy after an unprecedented shutdown is not as simple as flipping a switch," Ontario Finance Minister Rod Phillips said in a statement. "We need to plan this out carefully to ensure we do not spark a sudden outbreak, undo the progress we have made and put the safety of the public at risk."

Quebec to open schools in May; Ontario unveils plan to re-open economy

Ontario says its plan to ease COVID-19 restrictions will happen in three stages.

Canada's two hardest-hit provinces have unveiled plans to re-open businesses and schools amid the COVID-19 pandemic.

Quebec Premier Francois Legault says elementary schools and daycares in the Montreal region will re-open May 17 and attendance will not be mandatory. The premier says Monday (April 27) elementary schools and daycares outside the greater Montreal area will open a week earlier, on May 11.

Legault said high schools, junior colleges and universities will remain closed until September and Legault is urging those institutions to do so much online teaching as possible.

The premier says he is reopening public parks, allowing for more people at certain events such as funerals, and having hospitals resume some non-urgent surgeries.

Ontario says its plan to ease COVID-19 restrictions will happen in three stages, though the steps unveiled today contain few specifics all workplaces open and further relaxing rules on public gatherings - though large ones such as sports events and concerts would still be restricted.

The framework says each of the three stages will last about two to four weeks, though it does not provide any specific dates.

At the end of each period, the chief medical officer could advise staying in that stage longer, moving onto the next stage or reintroducing certain restrictions to prevent new outbreaks.

Dr. David Williams will take various factors into account for those decisions, the framework states, including seeing a consistent, two-to-four week decrease in the number of new cases and a decrease in cases that can't be traced back to a source.

Williams would also need to see fewer new hospitalizations and enough acute and critical care capacity in hospitals, including access to ventilators and a good supply of personal protective equipment.

The gradual reopening will continue until the pandemic has passed or a vaccine is available, the framework says.

Businesses that are reopening will be given guidelines by the government on how to do so safely, including hygiene and sanitation standards and physical distancing measures.

The province recently extended a state of emergency in place since mid-March to mid-May. Public gatherings of more than five people are banned and all non-essential businesses have been closed, as have child-care centres and outdoor recreational centres.

Education Minister Stephen Lee announced Sunday that publicly funded schools will stay closed until at least May 31.

Ontario reported 424 new COVID-19 cases Monday and 57 new deaths.

APPLICATIONS OPEN FOR 75% CANADA EMERGENCY WAGE SUBSIDY

A report found more than half of small firms with employees said they will apply for the CEWS.

The program offers a subsidy of 75 percent of an eligible employee's weekly earnings, to a maximum of $847 per employee per week to eligible employers, for up to 12 weeks. The funding is retroactive to March 15. The government said businesses can generally expect to receive their payment within 10 business days if they are registered for direct deposit on their payroll account.

To be eligible to receive the wage subsidy, businesses must:

1. Be a private corporation, non-profit organization, or registered charity.
2. Have experienced a reduction in revenue related to COVID-19.
3. Have had a CRA payroll account on March 15.

For the eligible revenue reduction requirement, businesses should choose which months the reduction took place over.

The first is the period between March 15 and April 11, where the baseline revenue is March 2019, or the average of January and February 2020.

The second is the period between April 12 and May 9, where the baseline revenue is April 2019, or the average of January and February 2020.

The third is the period between May 10 and June 6, where the baseline is May 2019 or the average of January and February 2020.

Registered charities and non-profit organizations can choose whether or not to include revenue from government sources when applying for the subsidy.

Before applying for the CEWS, businesses must confirm their business details and direct deposit information for payroll accounts are up to date. They should then register these payroll accounts for direct deposit, before estimating the subsidy the business will need. The government said businesses expecting a payment of $25 million or more need to receive their payment through the large value transfer system.

There are three ways to apply for the subsidy. Most companies can apply using the Canada Revenue Agency's (CRA) "My Business Account," or representatives, such as owners, directors, or bookkeepers, can also apply using "Represent a Client," or companies can use the Web Forms application with their web access code.

All claims that are approved through the CRA automated verification process will be sent for payment on May 5, and payments that are being made through direct deposit should begin to reach employers' accounts as of May 7.

The government said some applications will require a secondary verification, done manually, and in these cases the CRA may contact employers to verify information. It is expected that these secondary verifications will take no more than 72 hours in the vast majority of cases.

The CRA has partnered with financial institutions to enroll Canadian employers for direct deposit, and employers can now register business payroll accounts for direct deposit with the CRA through their bank portal. Employees can also sign up for direct deposit with their financial institutions after applying for the CEWS.

The CEWS is taxable, and recipients must include the amount of subsidy they receive on their Annual Return of Income when calculating their taxable income.

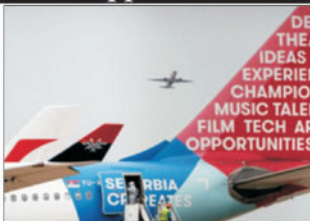

CEWS recipients will also need to report the amount of the CEWS that was used to pay each of their employees' salaries by using a special code at the bottom of the employees' T4 slips. The government said more information on these reporting requirements will be released before the end of the year.

Two cargo planes return empty to Canada from China without medical supplies

Two cargo planes chartered by Canadian governments to procure medical gear from China were forced to return home empty this week amid traffic jams at and around an airport in Shanghai as countries from around the world rush for supplies to fight COVID-19.

One of the planes was chartered by the federal government. Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said Tuesday, and another had been hired by a provincial government that he declined to identify. The locally chartered aircraft landed back in Canada Monday.

"There are severe restrictions on the ground in China in terms of how long a plane can actually stay in their airports before having to leave - whether it's full or not," Mr. Trudeau said. "At the same time, supply lines and shipments to, and from, the airports are difficult and interrupted by checkpoints and quarantine measures," he said. He said for the most part Canada has been able to navigate this chaos, "but these two airplanes were forced to take off empty."

Cecely Roy, press secretary to federal Public Services and Procurement Minister Anita Anand, said traffic flows prevented the federal aircraft from picking up its load.

"This occurred due to on the ground congestion caused by a significant surge in cargo flights out of terminals at the Shanghai Airport. As a result, the intended cargo was unable to get to the plane before its required takeoff time."

Separately, Health Minister Patty

Haydu says some of the personal protective equipment Canada has received from China is not appropriate for health care professionals.

"Some of the equipment we received was not suitable for medical care workers, and we are looking at that equipment to see if it can be repurposed for other kinds of workers who do not need the same level of protection," he told the House of Commons on Monday night.

Many U.S. states - where COVID-19 has hit hard - are competing with other countries to buy medical gear, from face masks to medical gowns to gloves and thermometers, and they have turned to aircraft rather than ships to speed delivery from China. A report by Shanghai Daily's Shine publication on April 15 said more than 200 cargo flights from around the world landed and took off from the city's Pudong Airport in recent weeks, loading up 10,000 tonnes of medical gear.

Mr. Trudeau said Tuesday that Canada will also rely on Canadian hospitals and other first responders get the gear they need. "We're continuing to receive millions of pieces of personal protective equipment," he told reporters.

Salman Khan Extends Ramzan Wishes, Advises Fans To Stay Home During Lockdown

Superstar Salman Khan on Saturday extended wishes to the people as the holy month of Ramzan commenced today. The 'Bharaat' star took to Twitter and while he wished people on the auspicious occasion, he also advised them to stay at home and wrote: "Ramadan Mubarak to all... Stay home stay safe!"

The 54-year-old actor also condemned the stone-pelting incidents that occurred with the health officials amid the coronavirus outbreak.

Earlier, Salman shared a video in which he put out a sharp message to the "jokers" who were floating government-imposed guidelines and venturing out during the ongoing lockdown, putting at risk countless lives of the deadly coronavirus.

In a 10-minute hard-hitting video shared on Instagram he pointed out that doctors, nurses and policemen are putting in long hours to curb the spread of coronavirus and urged people to respect their work and stay inside.

He questioned in his video: "Doctors and nurses are working to save your lives and what do you do? You started pelting stones at them? Those who have been diagnosed with coronavirus, are running away from the hospitals. Where are you running? Towards life or death?"

The 'Dabangg 2' star appreciated the efforts by the frontline warriors in the hospitals. "The virus which started in China is over in China now, but because of a few jokers, the whole of India will sit at home for a long time."

The 'Tiger Zinda Hai' star said that he was aware of many people who

Farhan Akhtar's Toofan Won't Decelerate

A day shy of the announcement of the lockdown, Toofan filmmaker Rakeysh Omprakash Mehra had taken off to the village of Kale, after wrapping up the film's shoot. And even as he continues to help out-of-work labourers near Lonavla, his team of editors is hard at work in Mumbai, working from home.

"Our editors keep sending me files, while the sound designers have also been forwarding their edits. We are doing our bit from home," Mehra tells mid-day of the boxing drama starring Farhan Akhtar, which was set to release in September before the pandemic played havoc with the film industry's 2020 line-up. "We will revisit [the release date] since we don't think life will be back to normal before September. It's better to focus ourselves on [restoring normalcy]."

Meanwhile, in Kale, Mehra has a getaway home, he has been helping those who have been rendered out of work owing to the pandemic. "They were employed for civil construction work, which has been sopped. So, they have no source of income. Every morning, we make packets of rice, dal, aata, and oil with the help of [locals], and aid the tribes who live in hills. With permission from the grampanchayat, we will also help the daily wagers by providing them."

'83 To Directly Release On OTT? Here's What Producers Of Ranveer Singh-Starrer Have To Say

The rumours started after the Ranveer Singh-starrer '83' was pushed from its scheduled date of April 10 owing to the ongoing COVID-19 lockdown.

Unconfirmed reports suggesting the upcoming Ranveer Singh-starrer '83' will be sold for release on an OTT platform before it opens in the theatres, have been denied by Reliance Entertainment, co-producers of the much-awaited film.

The rumours started after the film's release was pushed from its scheduled date of April 10 owing to the ongoing COVID-19 lockdown.

Lately, the trade circuit was abuzz with speculations that a global OTT giant with substantial reach in India has offered a whopping Rs 143 crore to the producers of '83' for the purchase of the film's release rights.

However, Reliance Entertainment has denied all such reports, claiming they will "evaluate" if the situation did not become normal even after six months, reports bollywoodmag.com.

"There is no truth to these reports. '83' has been made for the big screen experience. Right now, there's no intention or interest on the part of the directors or us as producers, to take these films to the small screen. If the situation deteriorates rapidly or there is no visibility of normalcy even after six months, we will evaluate them. But right now, we are all quite positive and I foresee that between the next four to six months, cinema halls will start operating. So that's the hope and mindset which we currently have," Shishabhai Sarkar, Reliance Entertainment Group CEO, told bollywoodmag.com.

Kapil Dev Hits Back At Shahid Afridi Over India-Pak Charity Series

Former India skipper Kapil Dev was pulled up by former Pakistan skipper Shahid Afridi after he turned down Shoaib Akhtar's proposal for a India-Pakistan series to raise funds to fight the Coronavirus outbreak. But Kapil has made it clear that he is standing his ground.

"You could be emotional and say that yes, India and Pakistan should play matches. Playing matches is not a priority at the moment. If you need the money then you should stop the activities at the border. The money which will be spent can be used to build hospitals and schools. If we really need money then we have so many religious organisations, they should come forward. It is their responsibility. We offer so much money when we visit the religious shrines, so they should help the government," Kapil told Sports Tak.

In fact, he wants everyone to look at the larger picture and not even think about cricket at present. "I am looking at the larger picture. Do you think cricket is the only issue we can talk about? I am rather worried about the children who are not being able to go to schools and colleges because that is your young generation. So, I want schools to reopen first. Cricket, football will happen eventually," he added.

Afridi had earlier said: "Kapil's reaction has surprised me. I expected better from him and feel one should not talk like this in these crisis times. Sport is supposed to bring people together and build bridges. It is pretty disappointing," he said.

French mull restarting season with cup finals

PARIS: French football could resume its season in June with two cup finals, French Football Federation president Noel Le Graet proposed on Friday.

Le Graet said that the French Cup final between Paris St Germain and St Etienne could be played on either June 13 or 20, followed by the League Cup final between PSG and Olympique Lyonnais three days later.

He suggested it would be the appropriately symbolic way to restart professional football after its suspension last month because of the Covid-19 pandemic.

"The restart of the championship is still to be decided but we might change the calendar a bit to play the cup finals first."

My proposition has not been contradicted so I consider that until someone says no to me, it is a yes."

A restart for Ligue 1 had been provisionally set for June 17 but Le Graet conceded it would depend on government approval.

"The ministers hold the key to the restart but the will of the league and the clubs is to restart," he added.

"We have to get everything in order to try and resume the season, which is a priority that was emphasised by the UEFA executive committee on Thursday."

The LFP said footballers will return to their clubs the week starting May 11 to undergo "full medical checkups" with a view to restarting Ligue 1 in June pending government clearance.

The LFP board met to review the main points of a draft document on medical and health protocols presented by the league's representative for club doctors, it said in a statement.

The document "foresees a return of players to training centres the week of May 11 to carry out full medical checkups, as well as swab tests, followed by daily monitoring, which will be detailed... between now and the end of April," it said.

KL Rahul: Semis Loss Still Haunts Us

Star India batsman KL Rahul said the heartbreaking World Cup semi-final loss to New Zealand, after a near-perfect show in the group stages, "continues to haunt" him and his teammates. In a chat show 'The Mind Behind', Rahul said if he was given a chance to change the result of any one match in the past, it would be the 2019 World Cup semi-final at Manchester.

"Most of us haven't got over that loss, it still haunts us. I can't imagine what the senior players must have felt but you know, in a World Cup, it just becomes even harder knowing that we played so well in the entire tournament. It still wakes up to that nightmare sometimes," he said.

India were perhaps the most dominant side in the group stage of the tournament, winning each of their matches except the one against hosts England.

The Virat Kohli-led side were the favourite going into the semi-final against eventual runner-up New Zealand but lost the contest by 18 runs. Just like other Indian cricketers, Rahul too is currently enjoying a rare break from the game because of the COVID-19 pandemic - forced lockdown.

"Let me talk about myself. I've just been sitting and doing some homework. I've been watching some videos from the past and taking notes of the things I was doing right and where I could improve, he signed off.

CERB Eligibility Rules Expanded For Self-Employed Canadians Amid Pandemic

Owners who pay themselves through dividends will now access, and those with business expenses will be able to earn more money.

OTTAWA - The federal government has quietly broadened the eligibility rules for the Canada Emergency Response Benefit (CERB) by allowing self-employed workers to earn $1,000 more than their monthly business expenses, and by expanding the benefit to include those who pay themselves through dividends.

The changes were posted to the CERB question and answer portion of the government website late last week, the same day HuffPost Canada asked Prime Minister Justin Trudeau whether the government would expand program eligibility for self-employed workers.

Trudeau had no announcement to make that morning in response to the question, but he said the federal government would "continue to fill gaps."

"We will continue to work on making sure that everyone who needs help gets it," he said.

Many sole proprietors had voiced concerns about being shut out of government assistance and unable to pay their bills.

On April 15, Trudeau announced that the CERB, a $2,000 monthly payment originally intended for those who had lost their jobs or were unable to work owing to the COVID-19 pandemic and mandated shutdowns, would be expanded to include "people making up to $1,000 a month."

"Maybe you're a volunteer firefighter or contractor who can pick up some shifts or you have a part-time job in a grocery store," the prime minister said in making the announcement. "Even if you're still working or you want to start working again, you probably need help in making ends meet. So if you earn $1,000 or less a month, you'll now be able to apply for the CERB."

"It's all still gross [income] just gross income after business expenses," said Ashley Michnowski, a spokesman for Employment, Workforce Development and Disability Inclusion Minister Carla Qualtrough.

The new guidelines also state that business owners who rely on dividends are eligible for the CERB, and their dividend income should be considered "as self-employment income provided it comes from non-eligible dividends (generally, those out of corporate income tax at the small business rate)."

be OK."

In addition, the government said it would create 76,000 new summer jobs for young people in sectors that "need an extra hand."

The economic impact of the pandemic was seen on the inflation front, where Statistics Canada reported the consumer price index for March was up a scant 0.9 per cent compared with a year ago. That was the smallest increase since May 2015 and compares with the 2.2 per cent annualized rate recorded in February.

The government planned to announce its fiscal update for February on Friday, including a deficit number bound to look microscopic compared to the tsunami of red ink unleashed by a pandemic that forced the economy to a virtual standstill in mid-March.

The prime minister also pledged unspecified aid for older Canadians whose finances have taken a hit.

"Yes, there is help coming for seniors," he said.

Globally, the grim pandemic toll continued to mount, with New York City alone reporting almost 15,000 deaths - the fifth highest number of fatalities after Italy, Spain, France and the U.K. COVID has killed more than 45,000 people in the U.S.

Ontario Provides Urgent Relief for Small Businesses and Landlords

Rent Assistance in Addition to Billions in Measures to Support Business During the COVID-19 Outbreak

TORONTO - The Ontario government is partnering with the federal government to provide urgent relief for small businesses and landlords affected by the COVID-19 outbreak. The province is committing $241 million through the new Ontario-Canada Emergency Commercial Rent Assistance Program (OCCERAP). The total amount of provincial federal relief that would be provided is more than $900 million, helping to ensure small businesses are ready to reopen their doors when the emergency measures are lifted.

Details of the new program were announced today by Premier Doug Ford, Rod Phillips, Minister of Finance, Christine Elliott, Deputy Premier and Minister of Health, and Dr. Merrilee Fullerton, Minister of Long-Term Care.

"The vast majority of Ontario's small businesses and landlords are struggling during this extraordinary public health emergency," said Premier Ford. "That's why we are doing everything we can to support them through these tough economic times, so they can hit the ground running when we are in a position to open up the provincial economy. I want to thank the federal government for partnering with us to help our small businesses and commercial landlords. I look forward to working together to also provide much-needed support to residential renters ahead of May 1."

The OCCERAP will provide forgivable loans to eligible commercial property owners experiencing potential rent shortfalls because their small business tenants have been heavily impacted by the COVID-19 crisis. To receive the loan, property owners will be required to reduce the rental costs of small business tenants for April to June 2020 by at least 75 per cent and commit to a moratorium on evictions for three months.

Partnering with the federal government on the OCCERAP builds on the provincial government's approach to supporting business during COVID-19. As part of Ontario's Action Plan Responding to COVID-19, the government has implemented a series of cash flow supports amounting to $10 billion to help support jobs and the economy, including:

- Doubling the Employer Health Tax exemption for 2020, cutting taxes by $355 million, benefiting roughly 57,000 employees;
- Eliminating penalties and interest to businesses who miss filing or remittance deadlines for various provincially administered taxes for five months starting April 1, 2020, providing up to $6 billion in cashflow for about 100,000 Ontario businesses;
- Postponing the planned property tax reassessment for 2021, providing stability for Ontario's property taxpayers;
- Deferring the upcoming quarterly (June 30) remittance of education property tax to school boards by 90 days, providing municipalities with the flexibility to, in turn, provide property tax deferrals of over $1.8 billion to local residents and businesses;
- Implementing the new Regional Opportunities Investment Tax Credit for businesses that make eligible capital investments in designated regions of the province where employment growth has significantly lagged behind

Ontario has also suspended time-of-use electricity rates for eligible small businesses, as well as residential and farm time-of-use customers, holding electricity prices to the off-peak rate of 10.1 cents-per-kilowatt-hour, for 24 hours per day, seven days a week for 45 days, for all time-of-use customers, who make up the majority of electricity consumers in the province. By switching to a fixed off-peak rate, time-of-use customers will see rate reductions of over 50 per cent compared to on-peak rates.

"To help stop the spread of COVID-19, businesses have closed their doors and employees have stayed home and that has been working, but it has also created significant financial hardship," said Rod Phillips, Minister of Finance. "By subsidizing rent payments, reducing taxes, extending deadlines, and eliminating penalties and interest, we're helping to ensure businesses can start up quickly when the time is right."

The OCCERAP program has also worked with the federal government to develop the Small and Medium-sized Enterprise Loan that will enable up to $40 billion in lending, supported through Export Development Canada and the Business Development Bank. This program will help businesses meet cash flow requirements through guaranteed loans.

More signs COVID-19 is slowing in Canada; students to get federal help

TORONTO - More signs the spread of COVID-19 is slowing in Canada emerged on Wednesday, prompting further talk of easing the isolation measures that have proven economically crippling.

The country's largest province, for example, reported its slowest growth in identified COVID cases in weeks - 510 or a daily increase of 4.3 per cent. Ontario also reported 37 new deaths, bringing the total to 659 deaths on a caseload of 12,245.

Also encouraging was the fact that the percentage of resolved infections in the province surpassed the 50 per cent mark for the first time.

Premier Doug Ford has mused Ontario could start easing restrictions ahead of next month's long weekend if the moderating trend holds. Premier Dennis King of Prince Edward Island, which has had just two dozen cases, so deaths, and no new reported cases - has also said a gradual lifting of anti-COVID measures could start as early as May 1.

Quebec Premier François Legault, whose province reported 93 more deaths, said he would present a plan next week to reopen schools gradually, starting in areas where the situation was most stable.

Chief Public Health Officer Dr. Theresa Tam said Canada was making progress in slowing the epidemic but warned against letting down its guard. The focus, Tam said, must be placed on stopping outbreaks in places like seniors homes and in other places where vulnerable populations live together in close quarters.

Legault called on Ottawa to send 1,000 military personnel to help in Quebec's badly hit and understaffed long-term care homes. Ford similarly asked for military help.

How exactly Canada gets on the road to normalization will largely depend on the closure of the Canada-U.S. border will stay in place until May 21st at least, he said.

Regardless, the financial fallout of the anti-COVID measures - social isolation and the shut down of non-essential commercial activities - has been profound. Trudeau, who had already announced more than $100 billion in various forms of assistance, offered more financial supports on Wednesday.

A total of $9 billion would go to students who lacked access to previously announced emergency assistance. Students will receive $1,250 a month from May to August under the program.

"As young people, what you're going through matters," Trudeau said. "We want to make sure that you will

Six Ontario nursing homes 'failed to protect residents' from COVID-19, proposed class action lawsuit alleges

The operators of six for-profit Ontario long-term care homes hit by COVID-19 outbreaks "failed to protect residents" by neglecting to put adequate measures in place to prevent the spread of the virus, according to allegations in a proposed class action lawsuit filed in Superior Court on Friday.

The claim, which has not yet been certified as a class action lawsuit by a judge, involves six long-term care facilities, including the Estevanville Care Centre in Scarborough, Vermont Square in The Annex, and Hawthorne Place Care Centre in North York, which are all operated by ResponSive Group Inc. or one of its subsidiary entities.

It alleges that the homes did not adequately plan for the virus, did not supply staff and visitors with sufficient personal protective equipment, did not appropriately screen visitors and staff, and did not follow the leadership of public health officials and comply with their guidance and directives.

The claim states that as of April 23, 71 people living in the six homes have died during the pandemic.

"In most cases, they died alone without their families and loved ones at their side," the statement of claim read. "In many cases, family members of those who died were not even aware that their parents and grandparents were

COVID-19 among long-term care residents and 1,187 among staff at those facilities.

According to the statement of claim, nurses and staff at Hawthorne Place were reportedly told by a manager not to wear masks, suggesting that it would "severely restrict."

The suit also alleges that staff members at the North York facility were told to return surgical masks before they left work so the masks could be reused and N95 masks were "kept under lock and key."

"Staff working late shifts could not access even basic masks," the statement of claim reads.

It also alleges that at Anson Place in Hagersville, Ont., "little attempt was made by management" to separate healthy residents with residents who were confirmed to have or suspected of having COVID-19.

"Residents who had tested positive for COVID-19 continued to share ward units and bathrooms with healthy residents," the statement of claim read.

At Hawthorne Place, the lawsuit states, a resident who later tested positive for the virus was not isolated while their results were pending and had access to shared areas, placing remaining residents and staff at "extreme peril."
