Canada's government promises more to end poverty

Canada is considered a wealthy country but many people live in poverty and the Canadian government has vowed to do more to help them. The federal government has a Poverty Reduction Strategy and it has taken some concrete steps to reduce poverty.

In 2015, it introduced a direct monthly payment to help families with the cost of raising each child. It also increased a monthly payment which is given to the lowest income single seniors. The government says it has invested more than $20 billion in housing to help more than one million families find an affordable home. It says these measures have helped lift more than one million Canadians out of poverty between 2015 and 2018 "but we know we have to do more," acknowledged a statement issued October 17, 2020, the International Day for the Eradication of Poverty.

Immigrants have a higher poverty rate.

In 2019, almost one in five children in Canada live in poverty, according to a report by Campaign 2000, a non-partisan network of organizations committed to ending poverty. The rate is higher for Indigenous children ranging from 22 per cent for mixed race or Metis children to 53 per cent of First Nations children living on reserves.

Among landed immigrants or permanent residents of Canada 35 per cent lived in poverty and racialized children had a poverty rate of 22 per cent.

After the COVID-19 pandemic began, the Canadian government provided monthly payments to people who lost their jobs or had drastically reduced revenue. It says that close to nine million Canadians benefited. There was also a wage subsidy program for employers which is said to have protected over 3.7 million jobs. There were extra, one-time payments for seniors receiving government pensions, families and persons with disabilities. The government says it is committed to expanding these supports throughout the pandemic.

Anti-poverty groups will continue to lobby to get the government to take long-term measures as well.

Canada's Trudeau hits China on human rights, 'coercive diplomacy'

Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau has warned China that its "coercive diplomacy," repressive measures in Hong Kong and detention of Uighur Muslims are counterproductive for itself and the rest of the world.

Trudeau took aim at Beijing's record on Tuesday as he marked the 50th anniversary of Canada's diplomatic ties with China.

"We will remain absolutely committed to working with our allies to ensure that China's approach of coercive diplomacy, its arbitrary detention of two Canadian citizens alongside other citizens of other countries around the world is not viewed as a successful tactic by them," Trudeau said at a press conference.

He also mentioned Canada's "concern for the protection of human rights and places like Hong Kong and ... with the Uighurs."

Trudeau said that Canada would "continue to work with our fellow like-minded nations around the world, to impress upon China that its approach to internal affairs and global affairs is not on a particularly proactive path for itself or for all of us."

Ties between the two countries deteriorated in December 2018 after Canadian police arrested Meng Wanzhou, chief financial officer of Chinese telecom giant Huawei, on a US extradition warrant.

Ridolfino Meng was arrested during a stopover in Vancouver, where she has a home, and is charged with bank fraud related to violations of US sanctions against Iran.

Soon after, China detained Canadians Michael Spavor and Michael Kovrig and charged them with spying.

Canada's Trudeau hits China on human rights, 'coercive diplomacy'

Canada has also stepped up political and diplomatic pressure on Beijing.

Earlier this month, a Canadian warship sailed through the sensitive Taiwan Strait, a voyage that comes at a time of separate military tensions between China and Taiwan.

Canada's navy has sailed through the Taiwan Strait before, including in September of last year.

China, which claims democratic Taiwan as its own territory, has stepped up its military activity around the island in the past few weeks, including sending fighter jets

Canada's ambassador to China obtained "virtual consular access" to Spavor and Kovrig over the weekend, the Foreign Affairs Ministry said on Saturday.

Last year, two other Canadians, Robert Lloyd Schellenberg and Fan Wei, were also sentenced to death in separate drug cases.

PM believes Canada has 'more tools' than in first wave of COVID-19 to avoid a second shutdown

Canada's prime minister says he doesn't believe a second nationwide lockdown is imminent in light of an increase in COVID-19 cases across Canada in recent weeks.

Justin Trudeau told Global News he believes, now that the general public knows more about the need for masks and social distancing amid the pandemic, that some "targeted lockdowns" maybe all that is required to avoid a second shutdown.

"There's no question that the second wave is really frustrating and painful," Trudeau said. "But we have more tools now. We know how targeted lockdowns are more effective. We know what areas are most vulnerable to spread."

On Monday Canada recorded 1,742 new cases of the novel coronavirus, with Quebec accounting for 1,038 cases and six new deaths while Ontario reported 704 with four new deaths.

Through the pandemic, Canada's long-term care homes took a large hit, with over 800 outbreaks across the sector, according to a report from the Canadian Institute for Health Information (CIHI).

The agency says more than 80 per cent of COVID-19 deaths in Canada have been in long-term care (LTC) homes and retirement homes.

Since April the federal government has been sending support to the provinces, which regulate care homes, in the form of direct aid from Canada's Armed Forces and the Red Cross - funded in part by a federal investment of up to $100 million announced in May.

However, after leaving the care homes in August, the Armed Forces reported problems with inexperienced staff struggling with flooding and maintaining fire hydrants.

Seven of the biggest problem spots were in Ontario at homes in Pickering, Toronto, Brampton and Woodbridge. NDP backs down on requesting WE Charity does regarding Trudeau's family members after filter.

Trudeau says that since enlisting the military, both Ottawa and the provinces recognize that long-term care

Trudeau says the most vulnerable communities and that work needs to be done to protect those populations.

"You shouldn't have to wait to move to a different province to make sure that you can care for your loved ones, or yourself, the confidence about going into a care facility," Trudeau said.

"I think there is a need to be able to set a level playing field across the country where every Canadian can have confidence that when they plan going into a care facility or send a parent into a care facility, they know that they're going to be well taken care of and safe."

The PM admits there has been some friction between him and the premiers amid the pandemic, particularly with a demand in more health-care funding, but says the level of co-operation has been "unbelievably positive."

"We're all pulling in the same direction. We all want the same things. Of course, it's going to be mild disagreements, but we all agree on the need to keep Canadians safe," Trudeau said.

A loss in tourism and plant shutdowns accounted for a drop in exports by 18.4 per cent and a loss of 23 per cent in imports during the quarter.

Despite the hit, Trudeau believes the border closure was worth it to keep Canadians safe.

"We can't talk about reopening our economy until we have this virus under control. And actually controlling the virus is the best way to help our economy grow."

Canada inches toward 200,000 COVID-19 case mark, with most new cases in Quebec

TORONTO - Canada's COVID-19 case load edged closer to the 200,000 mark on Sunday after a weekend in which Quebec had the majority of new infections and public health officials urged Canadians to remain united in their efforts to combat the pandemic.

The country reported 1,827 new cases Sunday, for a total of 198,151 infections.

Quebec accounted for 1,038 of those new cases, making the third day in a row the province has had more than 1,000 infections.

Quebec Health Minister Christian Dubé tweeted that the number of hospitalizations in the province continues to rise and urged residents to "break the wave to slow this down" and "protect the most vulnerable."

Ontario reported the second-highest number of new cases Sunday at 658, while Manitoba had 44, Saskatchewan logged 24, New Brunswick posted five and Nova Scotia had two. Health authorities said the new cases in the Atlantic provinces were related to travel outside the region.

Ontario has taken steps to curb the spike in cases in four hot spots by reverting them to a modified Stage 2 of pandemic recovery, which includes the closure of gyms and movie theatres, and a ban on indoor dining in restaurants and bars.

Toronto, Peel Region and Ottawa moved to the modified Stage 2 on Oct. 10 and York Region will join them on Monday.

extra mile" by downloading the COVID Alert contact tracing app or "sharing credible information" on COVID-19 risks and prevention measures via social media.

Her sentiments echoed those in a statement on Saturday, when she stressed the importance of a "collective effort," even though the pandemic is affecting each part of the country differently.

As of Sunday, there have been 9,760 COVID-19-related deaths in Canada.

The federal Conservatives on Sunday called for the House of Commons' health committee to investigate Ontario's preparations for a second wave of COVID-19, with Tory health critic Michelle Rempel Garner accusing the Liberal government of being caught flatfooted despite expectations that there would be re-examination in the number of cases in the fall and winter.

"As businesses are closed in another series of COVID-related economic shutdowns, we are looking for answers as to why the federal government left Canadians unprepared to deal with this second wave," Rempel Garner said during a news conference as MPs prepared for the resumption of Parliament on Monday.

"We need these answers so that we can move forward and keep Canadians safe while also keeping things open."

The City of Toronto, which has indicated its desire to join the program, has said its experts that EPR would mark a "fundamental change" in how it deals with waste and will also affect what consumers pay.

"We need these answers so that we can move forward and keep Canadians safe while also keeping things open."

Environmental groups, however, have urged the government to get the change right and are already suggesting they have concerns.

"The thinking at this point is really focusing exclusively on residential waste - it's possibly going to see some Ontarians not receiving recycling service, and we have some concerns about the way the recycling targets have been established," Ashley Walks, the plastics program manager at Environmental Defence, recently told CBC Toronto.

Monday's announcement makes as Canada starts marking waste reduction week.

Ford government reveals proposed changes to blue box recycling program

The Ontario government has released a new proposal to fundamentally change how recycling is handled in the province - one that transfers responsibility for dealing with waste to producers.

The concept, called extended producer responsibility (EPR), would replace the current blue box system with the goal of ensuring that producers take on the full financial and operational responsibility for the end-of-life management of what they sell to Ontarians.

"The government's intention is for producers to be responsible for designated products and packaging, including compostable materials," the proposed plan states.

The government also wants to expand the list of materials accepted in the blue box to include items like paper and plastic cups, as well as other single-use plastic items.

Case filed against Kangana Ranaut for allegedly spreading communal disharmony, actress reacts

Kangana Ranaut once again has come under fire. A Mumbai court ordered an FIR against the actress after casting director, who petitioned in the court, alleged that the actress is creating a communal divide between people of two communities and in the midst of coroner's court via her tweets on Twitter.

Sahil Ashrafali Sayyed, the petitioner, also mentioned Kangana Ranaut's sister Rangoli Chandel in the complaint. The order was passed on October 16 by Bandra Metropolitan Magistrate Jayden Y. According to NDTV report, "The allegations are based upon the comments made on electronic media - Twitter and interviews - and a thorough investigation by an expert is necessary," the court said. It directed the police station concerned to "initiate necessary action and investigation against the actor and her sister under relevant provisions of Criminal Procedure Code (CrPc)."

The petitioner has said that Kangana Ranaut has a massive fan following and is well-aware that her tweets will reach out to many people.

He also said that she is creating a divide between Hindu and Muslim artists and maliciously bringing religion in front of the two.

"Her sister, too, has made objectionable comments on social media to spread communal tensions between two religious groups," NDTV reveals. The complaint mentions her recent tweets where she compared the BMC (Brihanmumbai Municipal Corporation) to Baber Sena, claiming that she is the first person to make movies on Hansi Ki Rani (Nandkumari) and Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj and comparing Mumbai to POK (Pakistan Occupied Kashmir).

Kangana Ranaut responded on Twitter after the FIR was filed and said, "Who all are fasting on Navratri? Pictures clicked from today's celebrations as I am also fasting, meanwhile another FIR filed against me, Pappu sena in Maharashtra seems to be obsessing over me, don't miss me so much I will be thankful to see you all on Navratri."

Sushmita Sen to kick off season 2 of Aarya in Dubai in November

After receiving a phenomenal response from audiences for the hitstar Specials' riveting series Aarya, starting Sushmita Sen and Chandan Singh, the actress is set to begin shooting for the second season in Dubai. The first season left the audience with an open ending and hope for a season 2. The actress' character leaves for New Zealand with her family.

The directors' Ram Madhvani, Sandeep Modi, and Vinod Khawar plan to kick off the second season in Dubai in November. According to a daily, it will be a two-month schedule. Over the past few months, the production team has done virtual recon of the locations. The plan is to shoot a major chunk of the series before the year completes followed by a 20-day schedule in the first half of 2021. While the outdoor schedule requires the makers to shoot at a foreign location, the makers will decide as it depends on the condition and the pandemic.

Aarya also featured an ensemble cast of talented actors Namit Das, Sikandar Kher, Jayant Kripalani, Sohilla Kapoor, Sugandha Garg, Maya Sarve, Vibhijet Pradhan, and Manish Chaudhary in pivotal roles. With Ram Madhvani, Sandeep Modi as the co-creators and co-directors, and Vinod Khawar as the co-director, Aarya has become one of the most-loved series.

Co-produced by Ram Madhvani Films and Endemol Shine, Aarya is an official adaptation of popular Hindi crime-drama Penona. Born into an upper-class family in Rajasthan, Aarya (Sushmita Sen) is a diving wife to Tej (Chandrabhar Singh), an

Rajpal Yadav Opens Up On UP's Film City Project: You Can't Be Shooting Amidst Industrial Zone's Hustle-Bustle

A popular choice for comic roles in Bollywood, Rajpal Yadav is not amused by the Uttar Pradesh government's decision to build the "biggest film city in India" on the Yamuna Expressway.

The comedian-singer, who features in the upcoming Varun Dhawan-starrer Coolie No. 1, points out that there are several better alternatives in his home state for filmers.

Yadav feels the chosen site is devoid of natural scenic environment. "It is a great idea, but the location is far from ideal. Apart from the Yamuna river, you will only find buildings. There is also an international airport coming up at less, which is in the vicinity. You cannot be shooting amidst the hustle and bustle of a growing industrial zone."

Recently, UP chief minister Yogi Adityanath approved a 1,000-acre land to establish a film city at Gautam Buddha Nagar on the Yamuna Expressway. Citing the examples of the Film City in Mumbai, and Ranjeet Film City in Hyderabad, Yadav added that these serve as ideal places to shoot as they contain everything a filmmaker would want.

The veteran actor, who hails from Shahjahanpur suggests that the UP government instead build the film city in Pilibhit the northern part of UP. "It is naturally scenic and its location will serve Punjab, Haryana, Rajasthan, Bundelkhand and Nepal film industries as well. Politics cannot determine set. There is no place for political agendas in setting up a film city. It does not belong to any one person/politician, but to all those involved in the filmmaking process," says Rajpal. The actor is set to feature in Hanguana 2, Bale Chudhary and Bhool Bhulaiyaa 2 next.

PCB 'Disturbed And Disappointed' As 9 Players Breach Bio-Secure Protocols

The Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) has been left "disturbed and disappointed" after 12 persons, including nine players and three officials of the ongoing National T20 Cup in Rawalpindi, breached the bio-secure protocols in place for the Covid-19 pandemic.

Though the PCB did not disclose the identity of the cricketers and officials who breached the protocols, PCB Director of Cricket Operations, Muhammad Hafeez, Karim Akmal, Fakhr Zaman, Yasir Shah, Khameen Manzoor, Sohail Khan, Ahsan Ali, Imran-ul-Haq plus officials Abdul Raouf, Basit Ali and Rashid Khan. The individuals had spent time outside the bubble area within the vicinity of the team hotel on Friday.

Issuing a warning, the PCB has stated that those breaching the bio-secure protocols in future will be sent packing from the tournament.

"The PCB is disturbed and disappointed that some senior players and officials have breached the bio-secure bubble during the National T20 Cup. In doing so, they have put at risk the integrity of the tournament and, health and safety of their colleagues," said PCB Director - High Performance, Nadeem Khan as per a PCB media release.

"This is completely unacceptable to the PCB and following meetings with the concerned players and their team officials, it has been agreed there will be zero-tolerance for future breaches and those violating the protocols will be expelled from the ongoing and future tournaments," he Khansal.

Covid-19 tests were conducted on all the 12 individuals on an urgent basis, which all turned negative. The individuals picked up the costs of the tests, besides receiving warnings for their actions.

"I expect the players and officials to show responsibility as the world is watching and international cricket is standing at our doorsteps. Their irresponsible actions on PCB in organising and leaving sides during these challenging Covid-19 times," Khansal.

Honour Departed Players By Using Black Arm Bands, Says Sunil Gavaskar

Being legend Sunil Gavaskar has called for the use of black arm bands by teams whenever a player, who has represented his or her country, passes away.

"New Zealand's former captain John Reid also left us earlier in the week. He was one of New Zealand's greats in the 1950s and was also ICC match referee," Gavaskar wrote in his Sunday mid-day column, after paying rich tributes to sports writer and commentator Kishore Bhimani.

He added: "A few days earlier, Najib Taraki, who played a stellar one-day game and a very T20 international for Afghanistan, died after he was hit by a car while crossing the road. "Disappointingly but unsurprisingly, no player wore a black arm band to show respect to the departed ones. It appears that black arm bands will be worn only for some players but not every player. Whether you have played one game or hundreds of games for a country, the player belongs to the cricketing family and despite any differences perceived or imagined, his or her passing away should be mourned by the fraternity."

Of Bhimani, Gavaskar wrote: "Kishore also helped in drawing up the letter to the BCCI when the Indian Cricketers Association was first formed on the India tour of West Indies in 1976. On the flight between the Caribbean Islands, he would sit with me and discuss the formation of the Association and how to go about it."

Umar Gul calls time on topsy-turvy playing career

RAWALPINDI: Pakistan seerum Umar Gul, who earned the nickname 'Gul-doozer' for his rattling of stumps, has called time on his 17-year cricket career.

With no crowds to bid farewell to the national hero because of coronavirus (Covid-19) restrictions, the 2009 Twenty20 World Cup winner bowed out to a guard of honour from team-mates and opponents after his final match - a disappointing defeat in the National T20 Cup - at the Pindi Cricket Stadium on Friday night.

"The PCB is disturbed and disappointed that some senior players and officials have breached the bio-secure bubble during the National T20 Cup. In doing so, they have put at risk the integrity of the tournament and, health and safety of their colleagues," said PCB Director - High Performance, Nadeem Khan as per a PCB media release.

"This is completely unacceptable to the PCB and following meetings with the concerned players and their team officials, it has been agreed there will be zero-tolerance for future breaches and those violating the protocols will be expelled from the ongoing and future tournaments," he Khansal.

Umar was at his shortest bat in England in 2009, finishing as the top wicket-taker of the Twenty20 World Cup with 13 wickets. That included a mesmerising five wickets for just six runs in the semi-final win over New Zealand.

"Winning that World Cup was the highest point of my career," he said. "I remember those were very tough days and there was unrest in our country so our wish brought smiles back on the faces," Umar said.

Umar - who is now a member of PCB's Cricket Committee, attributes his Twenty20 skills to the early days of his love for the game.

"I grew up playing 20-20 over matches in the streets and then Rameez crick where you look for wickets in a 20-over innings," he said.

But his baptism was in Test cricket, where he became an instant hero in 2004.

In only his fifth Test, Umar destroyed a star-studded Indian batting order in a Lahore Test with figures of 5-21. His victims included the great Sachin Tendulkar, Rahul Dravid, Vinodul Solanki and V.V.S. Laxman.

The fast bowler had a burgeoning career, causing a stress fracture in his back.

He later featured in the inaugural Indian Premier League in 2008, topping the chart for the Kolkata Knight Riders with 12 wickets in six games - the only time Pakistan players were allowed to feature in the world's most lucrative league.

But the 2011 World Cup semi-final against India - in the one-day format - turned out to be his last Test.

He was targeted by the top order and finished with figures of 0-69 in eight overs for the match at Mohali.

Health Canada recalls counterfeit hand sanitizer sold at Dollarama

TORONTO — Health Canada has announced a recall after discovering a company selling a counterfeit version of one of the hand sanitizers on its approval list.

The recall, issued Sunday, says the agency became aware that a counterfeit version of the authorized Daily Shield hand sanitizer was found for sale at a Dollarama store in Thunder Bay, Ont. and may have been sold at stores across Canada.

Health Canada says it worked with BioLife Sciences Corp., the company behind the authorized product, to make sure the counterfeit version was not on shelves.

Daily Shield hand sanitizer is authorized for sale in Canada, but officials say the counterfeit version is not.

Health Canada says the counterfeit version of Daily Shield hand sanitizer is made with an unknown formulation that may not be effective at killing bacteria and viruses. The counterfeit product is suspected to contain methanol, which is not authorized for use in hand sanitizers in Canada and could pose serious risks to health including adverse reactions or death when ingested.

"Counterfeit products may contain ingredients not listed on the label, dangerous additives or other contaminants. In addition, they may contain the active ingredients that Canadians would expect them to contain," the recall said.

Health Canada says they have reached out to the distributor of the counterfeit product and instructed them to recall the product.

Dollarama has also agreed to stop the sale of Daily Shield hand sanitizer in its stores across Canada as Health Canada continues to investigate the issue.

So, if you have purchased some Daily Shield hand sanitizer recently, how can you tell if you've got the real version?

Health Canada says both versions

Will Canada exceed 100,000 Express Entry invitations in 2020? ANALYSIS: Despite the coronavirus pandemic, Canada is on track to shatter its Express Entry record.

Canada is on pace to issue 100,000 or more Express Entry invitations in 2020.

This would be remarkable, considering the negative impact that COVID-19 is having in Canada and around the world.

Prior to Canada imposing travel restrictions in March 2020, immigration minister Marco Mendicino announced the country would target 341,000 new permanent resident admissions in 2020.

In fact, Canada's immigration levels plan 2020-2022 set a target to welcome 91,000 immigrants to Canada through Express Entry.

Express Entry is the main way immigration, Refugees and Canada (IRCC) manages economic class immigration applications. The skilled class accounts for nearly 60 per cent of all new immigrants welcomed by Canada each year.

By the middle of March, Canada realized it needed to implement special measures to contain the coronavirus, which meant restricting entry into the country. This has resulted in significant uncertainty for the immigration system. In April 2020, Canada's immigration levels plan was amended, and they will remain in force.

Moreover, many individuals who have already received confirmation of permanent residence (COPR) are unable to travel to Canada at the moment for a variety of different reasons. For instance, some people have expired COPRs and are unable to travel to Canada. Also, people who get their COPR after March 18 are currently banned from coming to Canada due to travel restrictions.

Nonetheless, the ongoing Express Entry draws that have taken place on an eight-weekly basis since the start of the pandemic have been a pleasant surprise.

When there was belief at the start of the pandemic that Express Entry draws may be temporarily paused or they would see fewer invitations issued, the exact opposite has occurred.

Instead, we are seeing record-breaking Express Entry draws with Canada emphatically indicating it still plans to welcome high levels of immigration after the pandemic is over.

On October 14, Canada held its largest Express Entry draw ever. The draw marked one of just two occasions in which Canada issued invitations to Apply (ITAs) for permanent residence to 4,500 Express Entry candidates. These candidates will now be able to apply for permanent residence and, if they are abroad at the moment, these candidates will eventually be able to build a life in Canada once coronavirus travel restrictions are relaxed for COPR holders.

So far, Canada has issued 82,850 Express Entry ITAs this year. Recently, draw numbers have been between 3,900 and 4,200 invitations issued per draw.

IRCC goes according to plan, IRCC will also conduct Express Entry draws on October 28, November 11, November 24, December 11, and December 23.

IRCC issues 3,900 candidates in each of the remaining five Express Entry draws in 2020, then it will issue a total of 102,550 invitations by the end of the year.

Even if draw sizes are smaller, and IRCC issues an average of 3,500 ITAs per draw, Canada will still exceed 100,000 ITAs by the end of 2020.

So, what does this all mean?

Again, it shows Canada is very committed to welcoming more immigrants to support its economy, despite the disruptions caused by COVID-19.

Canada-U.S. border closure extended but Trump, Trudeau far apart on next steps

Although Canada and the U.S. have agreed to close their shared land border to non-essential travel, they don't appear to agree on several related issues — including what to do next.

More than seven months after the border closure due to the COVID-19 pandemic, Prime Minister Justin Trudeau and U.S. President Donald Trump have offered contradictory messages about the border's future.

The Canada-U.S. border closure agreement was set to expire on Oct. 21, but the Canadian government announced on Monday that the closure will be extended until at least Nov. 21.

In an interview last Wednesday on Winnipeg's podcast The Stern, Trudeau said Canada plans to keep the border closed as long as COVID-19 case counts in the U.S. remain high.

"We kept extending the border closure because the United States is not in a place where we would feel comfortable reopening those borders," he said.

Four weeks prior, Trump offered a different prognosis for the Canada-U.S. border closure.

"We're looking at the border with Canada — Canada would like it open," he said at the White House on Sept. 18.

"So we're gonna be opening the borders pretty soon... We want to get back to normal business."

Foreign affairs expert Edward Alden said the disconnect between the two leaders suggests there are no joint discussions about an eventual reopening plan.

"With the Trudeau government saying, 'No, don't open' — and President Trump saying, 'Oh, I think we'll reopen sometime soon,' that's no grounds for a serious government-to-government negotiation," said Alden, a professor of U.S.-Canada economic relations at Western Washington University in Bellingham, Wash.

Even though many Canadians support the border closure, which took effect in late March, it has devastated the tourism industry, separated loved ones and hurt border communities in both Canada and the U.S.

Alden said he understands why the border is closed for now, but that it's important to start laying the groundwork for reopening plans.

"The problem of not having those negotiations is, when do we possibly have a sense of when it will be safe to reopen the border?"

CBC News asked both the Canadian and U.S. governments about the fate of the border closure and got disparate answers.

A spokesperson for the U.S. Department of Homeland Security said the two countries are exploring the loosening of some restrictions.

The department's acting secretary, Chad Wolf, echoed this sentiment in a tweet on Monday.

"We are working closely with Canada to identify safe criteria to ease the restrictions in the future and support our border communities," he wrote.

But a spokesperson for Bill Blair — Canada's public safety minister — offered a less definitive statement on the next steps.

"We will continue to evaluate the best public health information available to us to make a decision on when and how to reopen our border," the spokesperson said in an email.

"This decision will be made in Canada."

According to Reuters — which spoke with well-placed Washington and Ottawa sources last month — the U.S. and Canada are exploring some border restrictions, but Canadian officials showed little enthusiasm.

Canadians advised not to go to the U.S. in another disconnect between the two countries, Trudeau is warning Canadians not to fly to the U.S., while the U.S. is welcoming Canadian passengers.

Although the U.S. agreed to close its shared land border with Canada, it still allows Canadians to fly to the country for leisure travel. The U.S. government declined to explain why it made this decision.

Conversely, Canada won't allow Americans to enter for non-essential travel by any mode of transportation they get a special exemption.

CBC News recently reported on some Canadian snowbirds planning to fly to Florida this winter — because they can.

When asked about Canadians — including snowbirds — flying to the U.S., Trudeau said in the podcast interview that they should stay home due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

"People have to recognize that they're putting themselves at risk, they're putting their loved ones at risk," he said. "The recommendation is to avoid non-essential travel, and that's for people's own safety."

Case numbers down in some states

Trudeau and Trump also disagree on the COVID-19 status of some of the U.S. state destinations Canadians might be tempted to visit this winter.

"I know there's a lot of people very worried about what's happening south of the border in Florida and Arizona and California and other places where the virus is not under control — far less under control than we are here," Trudeau said in the interview.

However, when Trump suggested the border would soon reopen, he said that Florida and Arizona are "doing very well."

According to U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention data, new daily COVID-19 case numbers in Arizona, Florida and California have declined dramatically since their worst peaks in the summer.

However, the infection rates in these states and across much of the U.S. remain at concerning levels.

Meanwhile, COVID-19 case numbers have surged recently in some Canadian provinces. On Saturday, Quebec broke another record for new cases in a single day, despite being under a partial lockdown.

Trump made a point of highlighting Canada's recent surge in cases in a speech last week.

"All over the world you see big flare-ups," he told a crowd of supporters. "Big flare-ups in Canada."

Ontario unveils plan to digitize driver's licences as part of major government services overhaul

The Ontario government has announced its plans to digitize a number of government services as part of its "people-first" action plan.

Premier Doug Ford made the announcement at Queen's Park on Monday afternoon. He said that while the work had already begun as soon as he took office in 2018, it was accelerated in the face of COVID-19.

"Whether you're getting married or renewing your driver's licence or health card or filing paperwork for your business, we want to make services more accessible, more reliable and more convenient for you," Ford said.

"From banking to groceries, businesses have adapted their operations to meet their customers' needs and our government must do the same."

The plan, dubbed "Ontario Onwards: Ontario's COVID-19 Action Plan for a People-Focused Government," includes 30 different projects aimed at improving the way people and businesses interact with government.

One such project includes the government Monday teased the development of a "digital wallet," which could hold residents' driver's licences and birth certificates.

"This new technology would allow you to securely access new services online where previously, you may have needed to go in-person to prove your identity," Ford said.
