Ontario reveals who will be prioritized next for the COVID-19 vaccine

TORONTO — Ahead of the anticipated arrival of more COVID-19 vaccine doses in the coming weeks, the province has now confirmed who will be prioritized next for its vaccination program.

In a memo sent out to local medical officers of health and hospital CEOs on Sunday, provincial officials said staff and essential caregivers in long-term care homes, high-risk residential care homes and First Nations elder care homes, along with any residents in these settings who have not yet received a first dose, are an "immediate priority" for vaccination.

"The provincial target of providing a first dose offer of vaccine to residents of all long-term care homes and high-risk retirement homes is arriving at completion. This includes work underway to make vaccinations available to First Nations elder care homes across the province," the memo said.

"At this time, we are pleased to report that residents at all long-term care homes across the province have been given an opportunity for their first dose of COVID-19 vaccine."

The groups that should be next in line, according to the province, include Indigenous adults in northern remote and higher risk communities and health-care workers with the highest risk of exposure to COVID-19.

The province has broken down health-care workers into four categories: highest priority, very high priority, high priority, and intermediate priority.

Highest-priority health-care workers include all hospital and acute-care staff in frontline roles with COVID-19 patients or those with a high-risk of exposure, including workers who perform "aerosol-generating procedures."

Other workers identified in the highest priority group include "all patient-facing health-care workers involved in the COVID-19 response," medical first-responders, including paramedics and firefighters, and community health-care workers serving special populations, including those who work at needle exchange or supervised consumption sites.

The province has identified "very high priority" health-care workers as those who work in acute care and other hospital settings not already identified in the previous category, along with those who work in congregate and community care settings, including community health centres, birth centres, dentistry clinics, pharmacies, and walk-in clinics.

High-priority health-care workers include those who work in community care settings with a lower risk of exposure, including mental health and addiction services and campus health-care workers.

Non-frontline health-care workers, including those who work remotely and do not require personal protective equipment, have been placed in the "intermediate priority" category, the memo said.

"The province said it has broken down health-care workers into these four categories due to the fact that demand for the vaccine will "initially exceed available supply," which may result in the need to decide who gets the vaccine first. Highest priority health-care workers and very high priority health-care workers have been identified as groups who should be vaccinated "immediately."

When all reasonable steps have been taken to complete first-dose vaccinations of all staff, essential caregivers and residents of long-term care homes, high-risk retirement homes and First Nations elder care homes, first-dose vaccination may be made available to the remainder of the Phase One populations," the province said in its memo.

People in this category include all adults ages 60 and over as well as staff, residents, and caregivers in all retirement homes and other congregate care settings for workers. All Indigenous adults, with the exception of chronic home care, and health-care workers in the "high" priority level are also included in Phase One.

To ensure equity and integrity in vaccine delivery, public health units and vaccination clinics should implement processes to fill last-minute cancellations, "no-shows" and end-of-day remaining doses with people

Kingston Fire issues warning after 5 people fall through Lake Ontario ice

Kingston Fire and Rescue is asking people to stay off Lake Ontario after five people fell through the ice this weekend.

"Many parts of the lake have open water and poor shoreline ice conditions. By venturing onto the lake, you place yourself and others at risk," Kingston Fire and Rescue said in a statement.

According to a statement from local firefighters, rescue teams were called out to Lake Ontario three times since Thursday.

On Feb. 11, rescue teams were called to the foot of Albert Street, after someone had fallen through the ice. On Feb. 13, they were called to Gord Edgar Downie Pier, after someone else fell through the ice.

Both times, firefighters say the people were able to pull themselves up before emergency crews arrived.

On Feb. 14, around 1 p.m., rescue teams were called to the foot of Emily Street after an iceboat carrying two people went through the ice.

Although they were able to get back up by the time crews arrived, a nearby cyclist that fell into the water and needed to be rescued.

In a tweet sent on Monday, Frontline Paramedics also said they had responded to several locals.

Due to the fragile nature of the ice, Kingston Fire is asking residents to stay off Lake Ontario.

"A Kingston Fire & Rescue rescue is as small as endavour," local firefighters said.

Why homeless people need to be among the first Canadians to get COVID-19 vaccines

SASKATOON — Advocates are urging public health workers to have concrete plans to ensure the homeless population gets priority access to the vaccine, given how likely they are to contract COVID-19 and become severely ill.

"They're having to face the tough choice of being outside on the streets — exposed to the cold — or being indoors, where they're exposed to COVID," Dr. Monty Chow, co-chair of the Canadian Network for the Health & Housing of People Experiencing Homelessness, told CTV's 5pm Morning News.

In Ontario, homeless people were 20 times more likely than the general population to be hospitalized from COVID-19; 10 times more likely to wind up in intensive care; and five times more likely to die within 21 days of testing positive, according to research published in Canadian Medical Association Journal Open.

So Ghosh stresses that specific strategies are needed for this at-risk population, which he said has been on the rise as a result of the pandemic.

Prioritization is already underway after Montreal public health officials began to administer vaccines to the city's homeless population last month. Officials there stress health-care workers and long-term care residents remain a top priority.

"Last month, Toronto followed suit, launching a pilot project to vaccinate people in 100 shelters in the city. Dr. Stephen Huang of St. Michael's Hospital, which is helping run the project with the city and several other organizations, said the initial rollout was, "overall, a resounding success."

"The goal is to develop a playbook so that we can have a playbook so that we can have a playbook so that we can go out to vaccinate people in shelters across the city," he told the Canadian Press in January.

Despite an eager group of residents and staff at the shelters who wanted to be vaccinated, Huang did note there were a small number of residents refusing the vaccine. But Ghosh said there are ways to handle hesitancy.

"He urged groups and organizations on the ground to enlist ambassadors with lived experiences of being homeless to be "early adopters of the vaccine" who can go on to "advocate others on getting the vaccine."

Ghosh said another "extremely difficult" challenge was keeping track of the homeless population and who was receiving the shots. But to pull this off would require the help of names who are "familiar faces" to the target groups.

"They should be ones providing the vaccine to them in the first place," he urged, saying they could help navigate them through the vaccine process and check in with them between doses.

"The homeless population is often facing significant trauma in the past, mental health concerns, they have mistrust in the system, so having names who are familiar with them in place can be a huge win."

Canada by two-thirds between Jan. 18 and Feb. 14, and Moderna reduced last week's shipment by 20 per cent because of production problems.

When asked this morning whether Canada has secured supplies from Modi, Trudeau called India a "great partner."

"Can highlight that India has been a great partner in fighting COVID, whether it's helping us with delivery of other pharmaceuticals or whether it's working together on potential vaccines," he told a press conference this morning.

"We're going to continue to build on the strong relationship between Canada and India, and ensure that we're looking out for our citizens, while at the same time we're looking to recover the global economy and create opportunities for everyone."

A statement from the Prime Minister's Office said the two leaders "spoke about India's significant efforts in producing vaccine production and supply, which have provided vital support to countries around the world."

"The two leaders agreed to work together on access to vaccines," it said.

People are gathered outdoors, possibly in a shelter or community center.

Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi says his country — home to the world's largest vaccine maker — will "do its best" to help Canada secure supplies of coveted COVID-19 vaccines.

Modi tweeted this morning that he responded to a call from his "friend" Prime Minister Justin Trudeau.

"Prime Minister Trudeau informed Prime Minister Modi about Canada's requirements of COVID-19 vaccines from India," says a summary of the call issued by the Indian government.

"The prime minister assured the Canadian PM that India would do its best to support Canada's vaccination efforts, just as it had done for many other countries already."

Health Canada is reviewing two separate applications for approval of the vaccine developed by AstraZeneca and Oxford University researchers, including a joint pitch from the Serum Institute of India (SII), a private enterprise in Pune in western India.

AstraZeneca Canada filed an application for its vaccine with Health Canada in October. Just last month, Canada's Verty Pharmaceuticals and SII — which has capacity to produce roughly 2.4 million doses per day — filed a separate application.

Canada, which has signed agreements to procure a range of vaccine candidates, has a deal with AstraZeneca for 20 million doses.

As of today, Canada has administered more than 1.1 million doses of either the Moderna or Pfizer-BioNTech vaccine across the country.

But vaccination efforts have slowed down since Pfizer-BioNTech announced it would cut deliveries to

Janhvi Kapoor leaves a heart-emotion on Kartik Aaryan's special Valentine's Day post

Love is in the air! And we're not just talking about Valentine's Day today. We're talking about the youngest and the new couple in Bollywood Kartik Aaryan and Janhvi Kapoor.

Kartik Aaryan took to his social media today to mark V-day and shared a lovely clip of himself posing with a bar of chocolate. The chocolate brand that he endorses has his caption the picture saying, 'How far will you go for love?' While the picture is truly magical, it looks like this picture took his romance from too bluish! Janhvi Kapoor left a pink-heart emotion on his post and this was caught netizens' attention.

Ever since they took their Goa trip together, pictures were leaked, fans have kept a keen eye on them. Okay then, let's wait for this young couple to let out their 'secrets' soon, until then we keep playing the guessing game and look out for some more class-act social media.

Kartik Aaryan has some major big budget films awaiting in the pipeline this year. Starting with Blood

Bhūlalaya 2 and Dostana 2, then moving on to new projects like his upcoming film Phir, the remake of Ala Vaikuntapurambal and his project with Katrina Kaif which has not been confirmed yet but sources are

Vipul Patwa: Parineeti Chopra's version more narrative

When director Ribhu Dasgupta set the scene for Vipul Patwa to compose a track for The Girl on the Train, he punched above his weight to create a narrative around her life in food. "[By the end of our discussion] I could visualize our protagonist who is a woman who lives in London, she's a drinker, and she's often due to the trauma that she is enduring.

We needed a track that could do justice to the tragedy that she was going through," says Patwa, who approached Neha Kakkar with an appeal to render the song, without a fee. Patwa was tasked with the job of creating a relationship with the film's lead character who is a woman who lives in London, she's a drinker, and she's often due to the trauma that she is enduring.

Salman Khan confirms his cameo in Shah Rukh Khan starrer Pathan on Bigg Boss 14

The much-awaited news is here! Salman Khan has confirmed that he is indeed shooting his cameo in Shah Rukh Khan's Pathan soon. The actor on Weekend Ka Vaar on Bigg Boss 14, confirmed that as soon as Bigg Boss 14 SEASON comes to an end, he will begin shooting for Pathan, followed by Tiger 3 and then Kabhi Kabhi Dilli before Bigg Boss returns for the 15th season.

On Saturday's episode, Salman Khan was talking about Bigg Boss 14 is coming to an end soon! He then said that the audience won't have to wait much for the next season while also mentioning his next date of return. He said, "Life goes on, the show goes on! This show will end after which we start Pathan, then Tiger 3, and then Kabhi Kabhi Dilli. After eight months, Bigg Boss 15 will make a comeback."

Salman Khan has a prolonged action scene in Pathan which will be shot in UAE. It features not just him, but also Shah Rukh Khan, Deepika Padukone, and John Abraham. Apart from this, a special cameo scene is being designed for his appearance as Tiger. It's going to be a massive stunt with all the stunts in the United Arab Emirates," a source told BollywoodHungama earlier, adding further that Salman is being paid upfront fees for his appearance as Tiger in Pathan. "The entrance of Salman and SRK, along with the new scene before action scene on that Khalifa with SRK is going to be

India high on Fantasttic five

The M.A. Chidambaram Stadium in R Ashwin's spiritual, cricketing home. It's here that he took his first steps towards international superstardom. It's here that he spent his early years in the relative anonymity of local and first-class cricket.

His organic ascension up the ladder has presented the off-spinner with more than one opportunity to express his gratitude for the red. Chappell has played in his extraordinary journey. He has seldom not seized that chance, so it came as no surprise when he delighted a thrilled audience with a majestic exhibition of his craft on the second day of the second Test against England on Sunday.

Exactly a week back, Ashwin, 34, had pitched up for 61 in England's second innings of the first Test. There was a touch to the gyration in that effort, because India were always fighting a losing battle after crossing a lead of 241. That seven days on, he has put his team on course to level the series but make his 29th five-wicket haul that match redefining.

Ashwin's use of 45- he now has 27 wickets in seven innings at Chappell-bowled India to a commanding 195-run lead on the first innings, a tally that had mushroomed to 249 after the hosts finished Day Two on 54 for one. It's improbable, if not downright impossible, to envisage any result other than a home victory at some stage in the next couple of days.

Jack Leach and especially Moeen Ali hadn't made the most of the help they received from the dry Chennai surface on Saturday.

Ashwin showed them the way a day later, falling back on his mastery over line and length and involving subtle variations to maintain sustained pressure on a batting line-up bereft of ideas and fight once in-form skipper Joe Root fell, top-edging a sweep off debutant left-arm spinner Anar Patel to short free-kick.

The sweep had served England's purpose well on the first two days of the first Test when the ball came slowly and evenly off the deck. Bating wasn't as straightforward this time around, but as Rohit Sharma proved on Day One, the sweep could still be productive when used judiciously. England didn't, and Ashwin was at hand to lure them to their doom.

His comical plotting England's downfall included the impressive Anar Patel, pace ace Ishant Sharma and Mohammed Siraj, and Rishabh Pant, who grabbed two sensational left-handed pouches behind the stumps. All in all, it was a near-perfect day for the hosts. If only they could allow mind, and not heart, to call the shots when they decide to review sweeping decisions.

Arjun Tendulkar shines with bat and ball

Mumbai's young all-rounder Arjun Tendulkar smashed a 31-ball, unbeaten 77 and picked up three wickets for 41 runs as MCC Cricket Club handed India Gymkhana a 194-run defeat in a second round Group A match of the DY Patil Group A sponsored 73rd Police Invitation Shield cricket tournament at the Gymkhana on Sunday.

Tendulkar hit five fours and eight singles including five runs in an over off Habib Deldar, the off-spinner. Besides Tendulkar's superb effort, batsman - opus Karim Dalvi (56) and No. 4 batsman Pragnesh Kandilwar's 112 - also played a significant role in MIOV's massive victory.

Hitting to bat, MIG scored a mammoth 385 runs for seven in 45 overs. Ishaan Goykhata found the target too stiff and was bundled out for 191 in 41.5 overs. Mihir Agarwal top-scored with a composed 77 and Praful Waghele chipped in with 57. Anshu Jaiswal (31) and Shreyas

Chavhan (34) along with Arjun shared the wickets.

Meanwhile, hosts Mumbai Police CC rode on fine performances of left-arm spinner Pathanj Chavhan (3-33) and opening batsman Sunil Patil to record a convincing eight-wicket victory against Cricket Club of India (CCI) in a Group B encounter.

Deciding to field, Mumbai Police dismissed CCI for 127 in 34 overs. Pathanj Chavhan (3-33), Anil Patil (2-34) and Yash Chavan (2-15) were responsible in taking the wickets. Later, Mumbai Police easily chased the target, scoring 128 runs for 2 wickets in just 27.1 overs. Opener Sunil Patil made 70 to ensure the win.

Pakistan Super League 6 - Team Profile: Quetta Gladiators look to Gayle force this year

KARACHI: Quetta Gladiators have been the only FBL Pakistan Super League franchise which has retained the captain, head coach and mentor for the sixth straight season as Sarfaraz Ahmed, Moin Khan and the iconic figure of Sir Vivian Richards collectively dream of winning a second trophy this year.

The stars of so-called 'pale face' in the shape of former West Indies great Chris Gayle (the 36-year-old) is a massive parable taken by Quetta. No one in the history of Twenty20 cricket has scored more runs than the globe-trotting Gayle's staggering tally of 13,584 from 411 matches. Now it's up to the big left-handed opener to prove that he's still a powerhouse after signing up for his third FBL franchise.

Quetta, however, have been deprived of Shane Watson since the Australian stalwart has retired from all forms of cricket last year.

The main cause of Quetta's fifth-place finish for the first time in 2020 was the laybacked tournament schedule that left them bogged as they were constantly on the move while overlooking from Karachi, Lahore, Multan and Rawalpindi, with hardly any space to overcome jet-lag.

York Region plans to set up drive-thru vaccination clinic at Canada's Wonderland

Officials in York Region say Sunday they are planning to open a vaccination clinic at Canada's Wonderland.

In an e-mail sent to CTV News, York Region's medical officer of health, Dr. Karim Kurji, confirmed that they are eyeing to set up drive-thru vaccination clinics at the Vaughan amusement park and the Markham Fairgrounds.

Kurji said details are currently being worked out. Canada's Wonderland is closed but has announced plans to reopen in May if the province gives the green light.

In addition to the two sites, the doctor noted that the region is planning multiple fixed vaccination clinics and mobile clinics as well as an outreach program for areas disproportionately affected by COVID-19.

"Details are currently being finalized for five static vaccination clinic locations to be located in the Town of Newmarket, Town of Georgina, City of Richmond Hill, City of Markham and City of Vaughan," Kurji said.

"Sites are being chosen based on accessibility criteria, population distribution and feasibility."

The doctor noted that the sites are subject to change based on capacity and operational needs.

"The supply of COVID-19 vaccines is not arriving all at once, so distribution is happening in stages," Kurji said. "When more supplies become available, vaccines will be offered to everyone who wants one in their region."

Feds expect Pfizer to start ramping up vaccine deliveries to Canada this week

OTTAWA — Canada's sluggish COVID-19 vaccination efforts are expected to get a big boost starting this week as the federal government prepares for a ramp up in the delivery of shots from Pfizer-BioNTech following a month-long lull.

The Public Health Agency of Canada says it expects the two pharmaceutical companies to deliver more than 400,000 doses this week and another 475,000 following a slowdown as Pfizer expanded a production plant in Belgium.

The health agency says Canada will then receive nearly 450,000 doses per week until the beginning of April, when Pfizer and BioNTech will have fulfilled their contract to deliver 4 million shots by the end of March.

The full schedule was published on the health agency's website late Sunday, and for the first time calculates the number of doses to be delivered based on six shots per vial rather than the previous five per vial.

The ramp-up in new deliveries starting this week will be welcomed by provinces and territories, which have administered the vast majority of the vaccines that they have received.

They may also ease some of the pressure on the federal Liberal government, which has been accused of mismanaging what amounts to the largest mass-vaccination effort in Canadian history.

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau last week acknowledged the struggle with deliveries, but said things will get better in the weeks ahead, and even better than that in April, when Canada is expecting as many as one million doses a week.

"We're approaching something we're calling the big lift," he said Thursday in a virtual roundtable with nurses and doctors from around Canada.

Yet the problems aren't entirely over. Moderna — the other company whose vaccines has been approved for use in Canada so far — has confirmed its next shipment on Feb. 22 will be only 168,000 doses, two-thirds of what had been promised.

Moderna, which delivers once every three weeks, shipped 180,000 doses last week — 80

Toronto Area have recently announced their plans to open more clinics as they get ready for mass vaccination once supply improves.

Last week, Toronto officials released the locations of nine clinics that will be used to inoculate residents. Peel Public Health also announced additional vaccination sites in the region as they ramp up preparations for the vaccine rollout.

So far, Health Canada has approved the Pfizer-BioNTech and Moderna COVID-19 vaccines for use. Inoculations in the province have hit a speed bump due to delivery delays and reduction of doses shipped. However, officials said they are expecting thousands of doses to be delivered this week. On Friday, Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said Pfizer will ship four million doses to Canada by the end of March.

The federal government also announced that it invested four million more doses of the Moderna vaccine, and Pfizer will deliver 10.8 million vaccine doses between April and June.

More than 467,000 doses have been administered in Ontario, said 174,643 across the province.

per cent of the promised amount.

In addition, Pfizer's deliveries will only meet the promised number of doses if medical professionals can adjust to extracting six doses instead of five from every vial.

Getting that sixth dose requires the use of a low dead-volume syringe, which traps less vaccine in the needle and syringe after an injection.

Canada has now ordered 72 million of those syringes, and two million were delivered last week.

Mal-Gen. David Fortin, the military commander overseeing Canada's vaccine distribution, has said those are being shipped to the provinces to be ready for Monday, though no provinces reported receiving any as of Thursday.

Provincial governments are also concerned about how easy it will be to get that sixth dose, even with the special syringes.

To date, Canada has received about 928,000 doses from Pfizer and 515,000 from Moderna.

Where did CERB go? Data shows disparities between Canada's urban and rural areas

Kelly Ernst recalls standing on sidewalks, waving to needy families in Calgary's northeast as they opened their doors to pick up food hampers.

Ernst, vice-president for vulnerable populations at Calgary's Centre for Newcomers, said the memory speaks to how COVID-19 hurt the community, socially and economically.

Ernst said the Skyview Ranch neighbourhood is one of the most diverse in the country, with a high proportion of visible minorities and newcomers. Residents are often employed in precarious retail jobs or in warehouses, Ernst said. Others work at the city's airport or in the municipal transit system, both of which were also affected by the pandemic.

"Some of the first people to be laid off during the downturn were people in these precarious jobs," Ernst said, adding many were left looking for "some way to get through this whole thing."

Almost seven in every 10 residents over age 15 in Skyview Ranch, which received the Canada Emergency Response Benefit in the initial months that the pandemic hit, was available, one of the highest concentrations among over 1,600 neighbourhoods.

The Canadian Press analyzed federal data, obtained through the Access to Information Act, provides the most detailed picture yet of where billions of dollars in emergency aid went last year.

The data is broken down by the first three characters of postal codes, known as "forward sortation areas," to determine the number of active recipients at any time anywhere in the country.

The Canadian Press used population counts from the 2016 census to calculate what percentage of the population over age 15 in each forward sortation area received the CERB in any four-week period.

Some forward sortation areas in the data from Employment and Social Development Canada were created after the 2016 census and weren't included in the analysis.

Over its lifespan between late March and October of last year, the CERB paid out nearly $82 billion to 8.9 million people whose incomes crashed because they saw their hours slashed or lost their jobs entirely.

Some three million people lost their jobs in March and April as non-essential businesses were ordered closed, and 2.5 million more worked less than half their usual hours.

The data from Employment and Social Development Canada show that 6.5 million people received the $500-a-week CERB during the first four weeks it was available, or more than one in five Canadians over age 15.

What emerges from that initial wave is a largely rural-urban split, with the highest proportion of population relying on the CERB in cities compared to rural parts of the country.

Neighbourhoods in Brampton, Ont., on Toronto's southwest edge, had the largest volume of CERB recipients with postal-code areas averaging over 15,160 recipients per four-week period.

CERB usage also appears higher in urban areas that had higher COVID-19 case counts, which was not the case in Calgary's northeast.

"As cities relied more on accommodations, tourism and food as drivers of economic growth, the more they would have been sidestepped by the pandemic, and larger centres have a higher concentration of jobs in those areas," said David Macdonald, senior policy analyst at the Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives, who has studied the CERB.

"More and more of the country and certain cities that have a higher reliance on, say, natural resources wouldn't have been hit as hard."

In Skyview Ranch, census data says 12 per cent lived below the poverty line in 2016, and about three in 10 owners and four in 10 renters faced a housing affordability crunch, meaning they spent 30 per cent or more of their income on shelter.

Many live in multi-generational households, which the local city councillor said caused additional concerns about students and working adults spreading the virus to grandparents.

"These are real worries and challenges that members of my community have been facing throughout a pandemic," said Coun. George Chalab.

"The CERB program and the additional support to small businesses was a huge relief for the fear-worship folks in my ward."

The CERB program paid out $500 per week for people whose incomes had fallen to nothing as a result of the pandemic. The federal Liberals unveiled the program in April to set a monthly income threshold of $1,000.

At the outset, there were 6,520 residents of Skyview Ranch on the CERB, about 69.4 per cent of the population 15 and up.

That things improved. Businesses reopened and workers were rehired. The decline in the program's use in Calgary's northeast mirrored a nationwide drop in recipients overall, even though there were local increases here and there.

In all, there were 4.4 million recipients in the CERB's second month, the biggest month-to-month change, 3.7 million in the third, and a steady decline to almost 2.3 million recipients by the time the CERB was replaced by a trio of new recovery benefits and a revamped and restated emergency-insurance system.

Over the lifetime of the CERB, the Ontario town of East Gwillimbury had the highest average number of residents accessing the program, at 24 per cent. The town with the lowest percentage was Winkler, Man., at 3.83 per cent.

In Skyview Ranch, the number of recipients in the last month of the CERB stood at 2,446, or about one-quarter of those over age 15.

There is still hardship in Skyview Ranch. The area has seen a spike in COVID-19 cases and incomes have dropped again as restrictions rolled in through December, part of a wider shift in the national labour market.

Chalab said there still is a need in the area for government aid like the federal recovery benefits.

"Maybe not for everybody," he said, "but there are going to be a lot of folks who are going to be in need of assistance in the upcoming months as we move from this stage of the pandemic (and) into economic recovery."

FOR ALL

TORONTO — Steven Del Duca, Leader of the Ontario Liberal Party, issued the following statement:

"This week Doug Ford announced that he would be re-opening Ontario's economy without paid sick leave for workers. Any re-opening that doesn't include paid sick leave for all workers risks sending us back into another lockdown.

For months, Ontario Liberals have been calling on Doug Ford to restore and enhance the paid sick leave he cut in 2018. Workers continue going to work sick because he refuses to give them the security to isolate without missing paychecks.

Doug Ford needs to put forward a plan to deliver 10 days of government funded emergency paid sick leave now, before he sends workers back to their jobs. Lives and livelihoods are on the line.

When he's sitting on billions of dollars in unspent COVID-19 funding, there is simply no excuse for Doug Ford not to provide paid sick leave. Right now he's forcing struggling small businesses to foot the bill for their workers to have the security to isolate. They need government support now."
